TRUNK MURDER PROSECUTION

TRIAL NEARS FINISH

ACCUSED CLINGS TO ROSARY

DENIES KILLING OF YOUNG GIRL

London, Dec. 13. The case for the prosecution in the now famous "Brighton trunk crime Number Two" was concluded to-day, after a week's proceedings at the Lewes Assizes, where Jack Notyre, alias Macini, a waiter, is being charged with the murder of Violet Kaye, otherwise known as Violet Saunders, said to be his sweetheart.

The trial has attracted widespread attention and crowds have besieged the court daily. Among the exhibits are the black trunk in which the murdered girl's body was found and the hammer with which she was allegedly beaten to death.

Sir Bernard Spillbury, the famous pathologist, used a human skull to demonstrate Violet Kaye's injuries and produced a piece of bone from the actually fractured head.

He gave the opinion that the girl's fatal injuries could not have been caused by a fall.

Chief-Inspector Donaldson, who was in charge of the investigation of the Brighton trunk murder mystery, stated that he was satisfied that Notyre had nothing to do with the Brighton trunk Crime Number One.

STATE OF TERROR

Clutching a rosary, Notyre gave evidence, denying that he had anything to do with the death of Violet.

He said he found her lying dead on her bed and was afraid to tell the police because he feared they would blame him for her death. He therefore placed the body in a trunk.

The trial is expected to conclude to-morrow or Saturday.—Reuter.

URGES WIDER DEVELOPMENT

CHINA MUST BE SELF SUSTAINING

Hankow, Dec. 13. General Liu Hsiang, commander of the bandit-suppressing forces in Szechuen, who is returning to Szechuen after completing his mission at Nanking, arrived here this morning aboard the s.s. Wu Yu.

Judging by a statement he made to pressmen on his arrival here, it seems that he consulted with the Central Government leaders regarding the economic problems in Szechuen besides military and political affairs. He said, inter alia, that in the event of world crisis the economic organisation of China would be exposed to extreme danger as heavy industries were mostly developed in the lower section of the Yangtze Valley. He drew the attention of the Government to the importance of developing the resources of Szechuen.—Central News.

Punishing Political Slanders

DEATH PENALTY FOR AGITATORS

NEW NAZI REGULATION

Berlin, Dec. 13.

The German Cabinet in its last session of the year has passed more than ten laws, including one dealing with malicious attacks on the state and the protection of uniforms.

Another law provides compensation for persons who have suffered special damages in the fight for Nazism.

Still another enactment makes members of the Voluntary Labour Corps subject to discipline while in camp, just the same as soldiers.

During the same meeting, when the new laws were being turned out in round number, Reichspresident Hitler announced that the usual presidential reception by members of the Government on New Year's Day would be cancelled this year.

The new law against attacks on the state provides infliction of stiff prison sentences upon anyone making an untrue or distorted statement injurious to the reputation of the Government or the Nazi Party, or committing a punishable act while wearing a Nazi uniform or badge.

Penal servitude for life and even the death sentence may be inflicted where the object is to cause a riot or to arouse terror.

The law says that a German can be prosecuted for a breach of the enactment for the state, even though the offence occurs abroad.—Reuter.

THOUSANDS CROWDED IN TENEMENT QUARTERS

SAD PLIGHT OF CHILDREN

WAGE-STARVED PEOPLE NEED QUICK RELIEF

FIGHT AGAINST DIRT AND DISEASE

Startling revelations of poverty and overcrowding are contained in the fifth annual report of the Society for the Protection of Children, to be presented at the annual meeting at the Helena May Institute on Tuesday next.

During the year under review, there were reported to the Society 960 cases affecting the welfare of 2,182 children, the number of cases being larger than that for the previous year by forty-two. Once again, the Western District, where the tenements are oldest and least hygienic, and the density of population is greatest, produced the highest number of cases—359, while Kowloon provided 321 and Eastern Hongkong, 280. In only a few cases was it found, upon enquiry into the means of the parents seeking relief, that the help of the Society could not reasonably be given.

MONTHLY INCOME

Two years ago, the Committee reported that the average monthly income per head in the Society's cases was $2.93. Last year, the figure was $2.49. For the cases dealt with by the Society during the past year your Committee has to report an even lower average of $2.05. In this connection a comparison by districts may be of interest:

	1933-34	1931-32
Eastern Hongkong	$2.43	$3.25
Western Hongkong	2.07	3.19
Kowloon	1.68	2.28

Unless the circumstances of a case are exceptional, when the Inspector will probably ask her Branch Secretary for a decision, assistance in the way of providing milk or other food will not be given when the family income exceeds $4.00 per head per month. In 183 cases dealt with during the year the Society's inspectors reported that the families assisted were without any income: in a further 650 cases the average monthly income per head was $4.00 or less.

Apart altogether from the fact that trade locally has been at a particularly low ebb during the year under review, it need hardly be emphasised that an important reason for the acute poverty here disclosed is the ease with which unskilled manual workers can enter the Colony. The excessive supply of unskilled labour quite obviously results in irregular employment for the individual labourer, and in appallingly low earnings.

OVERCROWDING

The report contains a plan of a typical tenement house in a congested district, and states that on the ground floor six families were accommodated, while eight women slept along the walls on the "bed spaces" and four more had the comparative privacy and comfort of the "cock loft." There were 22 adults and eight children occupying a floor space of about 700 square feet, sharing the same kitchen, with no sanitary arrangements whatever in the building.

"The surprising thing is," says the report, "that, generally speaking, these tenements are not more offensive, a fact which speaks volumes for the thorough though unobtrusive work of the sanitary inspectors."

During the past year, 71 per cent. of the new cases dealt with by your Society were drawn from persons who could not meet the cost of renting a cubicle and who slept either on the space allotted to them as a "bed-space" or in close proximity to it. The cases drawn from Western Hongkong showed a percentage of 72 bed-spaces, those of Eastern Hongkong a percentage of 64. The percentage for Kowloon was 74.

BED SPACE RENTS

An investigation of 100 consecutive family cases in the Western District of Hongkong and of a similar number in Kowloon revealed that the average rent of a bed-space was 2/7 in Hongkong and 1/9 in Kowloon, while the average rent of a cubicle in Hongkong was $3.64 as against Kowloon's $3.19.

Lack of means to buy sufficient and suitable food and to rent decent accommodation inevitably involves disease, which menaces all sections of the community. Disease appeared in more than

NAZI PLOT DISCLOSED IN LITHUANIA

Kaunas, Dec. 13.

A sensational mass court-martial opens to-morrow in which 126 Nazis of the Memel District of Lithuania will be charged with complicity in a plot to transfer a portion of Lithuania to Germany by armed force.

It is alleged that the accused belong to a secret organisation affiliated with the Nazi Party in Germany. They are also charged with acts of terrorism against so-called "traitors." Seven of them are actually held for murder.

All the accused are liable to the death penalty.—Reuter.

EXPOSURE AT ARMS INQUIRY

DU PONT'S PROTEST

Washington, Dec. 13.

Figures showing war-time profits of from 20 to 362 per cent. on invested capital in scores of companies manufacturing war materials, were submitted to the Senate Inquiry Committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Nye, to-day.

There was evidence of many instances of large companies showing profits of 40 to 75 per cent.

Mr. Pierre Du Pont, one of the executives of the Du Pont de Nemours concern, protested against the figures given, stating they were entirely misleading, as the Government recovered 80 per cent. of these book profits through an Excess Profit Tax.—Reuter.

ANGLO-INDIAN TRADE

HOPES OF EARLY AGREEMENT

London, Dec. 13.

Answering a House of Commons question regarding the negotiations for an Anglo-Indian trade agreement, the President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Runciman, said the main difficulties had been surmounted, and there was every reason to hope that an agreement would be settled at an early date.

Regarding its scope, Mr. Runciman said it did not deal with the actual rates of duty on particular commodities, but laid down the principles to be followed in fixing Indian protective duties on United Kingdom goods, not only textiles, but also on other goods subject to protective duties. The United Kingdom, of course, gave certain assurances in return.—British Wireless.

A programme had been agreed upon which involved a reduction of the total imports of meat from New Zealand during that period, as compared with the imports of the corresponding period last year.—British Wireless.

Washington, Dec. 13. Mr. Baruch, chairman of the War Profits Committee, declared to-day that the Excess Profits Tax was the most effective method of curbing war-time profiteering. He praised Senator Nye's Committee, saying that the interests and endeavours of that body and his own would not clash.

It is understood that Mr. Baruch's Committee, which President Roosevelt appointed yesterday as a preliminary step in his campaign, to remove munitions makers' profits, is studying War Department proposals for war-time emergency, which include the establishment of an industrial control body, a price control agency, a labour administration body which will insure an equitable distribution of labour, and a war trade administration to direct foreign commerce.—United Press.

Washington, Dec. 13. The Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Claude Swanson, said to-day that some long distance Navy flights would undoubtedly be held in connection with the 1935 Pacific manoeuvres between Alaska and Hawaii.

The destination of any planes hopping off from either of these extremities of the naval defence system could not be announced, since their itineraries were not even mapped as yet, Mr. Swanson said.

He dodged the question as whether naval planes would attempt a flight to the Philippines.—United Press.

MASTERFUL PLAY FOR GOLF PURSE

HURT AS BRIDGE COLLAPSES

Miami, Dec. 13.

There was a dramatic incident just before the finish of the $12,500 Miami-Biltmore Golf Tournament to-day which Olin Dutra won with an aggregate of 292 for 72 holes.

A bridge on which Dutra and a dozen others were walking, crashed into a canal. Some of the people were thrown into deep water, but Dutra landed half in and half out, striking the turf bank with some force. He complained that he had strained his left arm.

Nevertheless, he resumed play. On the seventh green he seemed to be in distress and reeled again.

In a few minutes he was ready to go to the last hole and finished a superb match with a super-putt from twenty-five feet, scoring a birdie on the eighteenth hole.—Reuter.

Colour Secrets of the Screen Studios

COSTLY COSTUMES

Some of the secrets of the film studio were revealed in an interview by Herbert Norris, the costume expert.

One of the first things the new-comer to the studios learns is that white is never white. It may be yellow. Visit any studio (says a Daily Telegraph correspondent) and you will observe the handsome men and pretty women of the screen walking around in complexions of brightest saffron. Similarly, the hero of the piece, wearing the evening dress described in certain school of fiction as immaculate, actually sports waistcoat, shirt, collar, and tie of the same gaudy hue.

Or the cameraman may favour buff, bright blue, or pale grey. In any event, the screen will show pure white. The one thing you must not wear is white, which is much too dazzling for good photography.

In the same way, Mr. Norris avoids black and uses nigger brown.

The cost of dressing an elaborate film runs into many thousands. Of this outlay, however, a good proportion will be recovered from sales to theatrical costumiers.

"But why," people sometimes ask, "must such costumes be so expensive? Must the gorgeous satins and velvets, the gold lace, the gold and silver enamel in decorations, all be real?"

The reply is that they must. Your eye might be deceived at the other end of a room, the fakes might pass muster in a long shot. But in a close-up, be sure your screen will find you out.

GRETA GARBO'S NEW FILM

Greta Garbo's latest picture, "The Painted Veil," is one hundred per cent. American-made, but there is hardly an American in it!

The picture was adapted from the novel of an Englishman, Somerset Maugham, but the story takes place in China.

Garbo, who plays the role of an Austrian girl, is Swedish.

Herbert Marshall, an Englishman, plays the role of an Englishman as the husband.

George Brent, an Irishman, plays an English role.

Jean Hersholt, a Dane, appears as Garbo's father, an Austrian.

Cecilia Parker, of Canadian birth, is Garbo's sister, also Austrian.

Forrester Harvey, an Irishman, plays a Cockney Englishman.

Billy Bevan, pompous Austrian bridegroom in the picture, is an Australian.

Warner Oland, seen as General Yu, is a Swede.

Soo Young, and Keys Luke, Chinese characters, are actually natives of China.

Richard Boleslavsky, director, is a native of Poland.

The search for an American member of the cast is not entirely futile! Beulah Bondi, who appears as Garbo's mother, was born in Indiana.

THE ROYAL JUBILEE

In celebration of the Royal Jubilee, British Movietone News are preparing a short feature entitled "The King, God Bless Him." This will present a film record of the reign of King George V. from the Coronation in 1911 up to 1936.

Opening with a prologue in verse, composed and spoken by John Drinkwater, the film will show some early photographs of the King's childhood. Preserved film records will bring back the pageantry of the Coronation as well as Important events of the post-war days will be included, and His Majesty's voice is recorded on several occasions. The launching of the Queen Mary and the forthcoming wedding of the Duke of Kent will be shown.

HELEN CHANDLER RETURNS

Helen Chandler, the American film star who has been playing in the B.I.P. films, "It's a Bet" and "Radio Parade of 1935," has finished work here and has returned to New York, where she will star in a new stage production.

She received a cable from her New York agents about a fortnight ago offering her a part in a new and important play. She was then playing in "Radio Parade of 1935," and still had one shot of "It's a Bet" to finish. It was decided to shoot her sequences first and finish her part of the film in time for her to sail.

HONOURS RESTORED

SEVENTEEN YEARS
OF AGONY.

MAN ACCUSED OF COWARDICE

With tears streaming down his cheeks a white-haired and erect man of 75 watched the Armistice Day ceremonies in Paris last month for the first time.

He is Colonel Couthaud, an officer of the Legion of Honour, several times mentioned in dispatches, twice wounded, awarded the Croix de Guerre on the field of battle, but disgraced 17 years ago for desertion in face of the enemy.

Automatically deprived of his pension, this old soldier had striven ever since to vindicate his honour so that, in his own words, "he might look his war-time comrades in the face again." On Saturday, on Armistice Day, the Appeal Court restored to him his rank and honours.

On June 29, 1917, on Hill 304, in front of Verdun, the 366th Regiment, led for three years by Colonel Couthaud, suffered severe gas and liquid flame attacks which penetrated to the second line. The colonel, finding his telephone communications cut, handed over to his second in command and went to report on the situation to G.H.Q. He was arrested for leaving his post, and a month later was sentenced by Court-martial to five years' imprisonment with benefit of the First Offenders Act, and cashiered.

APPEAL COURT DUEL

When Colonel Couthaud's case came up before the Appeal Court there was a dramatic duel between the president of the Court and General le Boeq, now aged and infirm, who caused Colonel Couthaud to be court-martialled 17 years ago. The general repeated serious personal allegations against the colonel's character and courage.

General le Boeq said that Couthaud always argued. "My information about him," the general added, "proves me from pronouncing him incapable of cowardice."

The President—If that is so why was he not sentenced to death then?

General le Boeq—We took his 37 years' service and his family into account.

The President—But, good Heavens, general! Don't you think other unfortunate soldiers who were shot did not also have good records and families? In any case you are the only witness who denies what every other witness affirms of the accused—his courage.

Colonel Vesque, another witness, said that in his opinion circumstances fully justified Colonel Couthaud going to G.H.Q. in person. Moreover, he took proper precautions before leaving. He was only away two hours, and the fact remained that his position was never taken.

Colonel Couthaud, when rehabilitated by the Court, exclaimed, "My years of agony of soul are over. I can go to the Armistice Day celebrations to-morrow with high head."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Lecture By the Rev.
I. C. Tomlinson

The Reverend Irving C. Tomlinson, C.S.B. of Boston, Massachusetts, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, delivered a lecture on Christian Science entitled "Christian Science, A Practical Religion," under the auspices of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Hongkong, in the Roof Garden, Hongkong Hotel, yesterday evening at 5.45 o'clock.

The lecturer was introduced by Mr. A. W. Tickle who said:—"Friends, in her book 'Science & Health with Key to the Scriptures' Mrs. Eddy has written:—'Beyond the frail premises of human beliefs, above the loosening grasp of creeds, the demonstration of Christian Mind-healing stands a revealed and practical Science,' and again 'A higher and more practical Christianity demonstrating justice and meeting the needs of mortals in sickness and in health, stands at the door of this age, knocking for admission.' First Church of Christ, Scientist, Hongkong, welcome you here to-day to learn something of this practical religion from the Reverend Irving C. Tomlinson, C.S.B. of Boston, a member of the authorised Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts. I have very much pleasure in introducing the Reverend Irving C. Tomlinson, who will now address you."

The lecturer spoke substantially as follows:—

AN ASSURANCE

According to Mr. Irving C. Tomlinson,

MORE SHEEP
FOR AUSTRALIA

Australia in the comparatively near future is expected to carry 60,000,000 more sheep without being overstocked.

Recent experiments in districts prepared with new grasses resulted not only in decreasing sheep parasites but in increasing the weight of wool per sheep as well.

Australia now carries approximately 100,000,000 sheep, each producing eight to nine pounds of wool a year.

ONE MIND

The lecturer reasoned that since God is Mind, and God is infinite, and one, it follows logically that God is all the Mind there is, and there can be but one Mind. This Mind, he declared to be all-seeing divine Love. The activity of this Mind, he pointed out, is always in the realm of perfection, and transformation, not annihilation, is the result of this activity.

More than ever men are asking Pilate's question "What is Truth?" Mr. Tomlinson declared, and in explaining that the answer of Christian Science is that Truth is God, he quoted from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, this unparalleled definition: "God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love." Truth then, he pointed out, is the incorporeal God, without flesh or any thought of flesh; it is divine consciousness. He also quoted the statement from Mrs. Eddy's book "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany":—"If we say that the sun stands for God, then all His rays collectively stand for Christ, and each separate ray for men and women," and explained that the whole light, then, is Christ, and the rays are the children of God.

DEATH OF FAMOUS

WALKER"

VETERAN OF THE RING

The death was announced recently of Thomas Dawson Walker, better known as "Whimsical Walker," aged 84. Walker, who was one of the most popular clowns of the circus arena, had been living at Garsington.

He had been seventy-three years in the circus where admission cost a penny, and he was a link, one of the few surviving, with the heyday of pantomime harlequinade. For thirty years he played clown in the annual Drury Lane pantomime. During the last seven years he had appeared in the circus at Olympia.

Early last year he underwent a delicate throat operation that would have incapacitated many men half his age, but thanks to his great courage and never failing cheerfulness he achieved a triumphant recovery.

He delighted the heart of Princess Elizabeth when she went to the circus for the first time in January this year by allowing her to hold a "red hot" poker.

It is no exaggeration to say that millions of children, many now with families of their own, knew and loved the old man's engaging art. Few clowns had a more infectious humour.

Tradition has it that every successful comedian's ambition is to play "Hamlet." If Walker ever had that urge, it was satisfied, for nearly forty years ago he did take the part at Olympia, though it was in a condensed and humorous version. It was his only appearance in Shakespeare, but it was a great success, and Walker was fond of narrating how he played the part eight times a day for twelve weeks.

AN ANIMAL TRAINER

Whimsical Walker was born at Hull in a public house, which was kept by his parents. He went to school until he was eight, and became a clown at the age of ten. His first great success was in Hengler's Circus with a performing donkey which he taught to sing. On one occasion the donkey left the circus procession in Hull, walked into a hotel, and lay down on a bed, to the consternation of the terrified chambermaid who entered the room.

Walker also trained some geese, but one of them ate a hole in the safety net used by a trapeze act at the same circus. The men in charge invited Walker to supper the next night. Goose was served, and next morning Walker found only three instead of four of his performing geese. In addition he was ill for a fortnight with indigestion.

A performing pig was his next attempt. This prospered until the animal swallowed a sovereign—belongings to someone else—and died.

"BORN TO BE HUNG"

Walker was very proud of having had his portrait painted by

H.R.H. the Duke of Kent, is here seen inspecting nurses of the St. John Ambulance Brigade in Hyde Park.

Mrs. Laura Knight and hung in the Academy. "My father always told me I was born to be hung," he told a reporter in an interview some years ago. "His words have come true—I have been hung—in the Academy."

Walker had toured all over the world. Once he travelled to Sydney and back, three months at sea, in order to be the clown for five nights and two matinees. His last public appearance was in September at the first supper rally of the Circus Fans Association in Yarmouth Hippodrome after the last performance of the summer season.

He leaves a widow and one daughter.

MECHANICAL
COFFINSNEW COVER FOR INFANTRY
CRAWLING TO ATTACK

London, Dec. 5. In future wars infantry will be able to advance under machine-gun fire in "mechanical coffins."

This is the name given to an invention which the War department here is considering.

Actually it is an armoured box, propelled by a tiny motor. It will hold a light machine-gunner lying flat, and will carry him much faster than if he tried to crawl, and with far less exposure than in the normal advance where he had to run or walk forward upright.

Using an "armoured crawler" of this kind he may have a far better chance of getting within close range of the defending machine-gunner ensconced behind cover.

It is only about 7-feet long, less than a yard wide, and stands only knee-high. It is propelled by a motor of about four h.p. Traveling along the road the occupant sits comfortably in his "perambulator," but on reaching the battlefield changes to a prone position with his light machine-gun pointing ahead.

A slightly wider type is under consideration to accommodate two men.—United Press.

Princess Marina, is seen above photographed during a charity ball in Paris dancing with the British Minister

linson of Boston, the outcry of a suffering world to-day for salvation was answered twenty centuries ago by Christ Jesus when he said "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." He also stated that Christian Science comes to-day in his name with an assurance that the promises will be fulfilled.

Mr. Tomlinson explained that Christian Science teaches that whatever the need, there is always divine Love enough present to save one from any affliction, always Truth enough to destroy any error, always divine intelligence enough to point the way out.

In stating that the urgent problem of to-day is the solution of the uncertain and unsettled state of affairs in the economic or business realm, the lecturer explained that since there is just as much land and air as there ever was, just as much food, (in fact an abundance of food), just as many willing hands to go to work—an abundance of material supply, the trouble is obviously not in the matter condition or the material situation, but in the mental realm. All lack is a mental condition, he said, and mankind is experiencing the results of corruption, greed, materiality, prior to its purification.

He held that to-day Christian Science, as discovered by Mary Baker Eddy, offers a solution for the problems not only of the individual, the home and the church, but for the counting-room, the factory, the farm, even the government of the world. He explained that Christian Science is teaching that the words of Paul "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" state a present day fact.

ARMS TRAFFIC CONTROL

The revelations made during the Senate Committee's investigations into the traffic in arms have induced President Roosevelt to take the first step in a movement designed to bring an end to private manufacture of the instruments of warfare. He has set up a special committee to deal with the issue, and it seems more than likely that he will succeed in the task to which he has put his hands. If he does, the United States will be setting a much-needed example to the rest of the world. The British Government's attitude on this question is against nationalisation of the arms industries; it prefers a system of regulation and control, international in character. It is doubtful, however, despite the recent House of Commons rejection of a Labour motion against private manufacture, whether the British public as a whole is at one with the Government on this matter. Possibly when the result of the League of Nations' peace ballot is made known, it will be seen that the people prefer an out-and-out abolition of private manufacture. One of the questions in that ballot deals specifically with the point: it reads: "Should the manufacture and sale of arms for private profit be prohibited by international agreement?" Efforts have been made by Government spokesmen to stress the difficulties in the way of an international understanding on this issue, but it will be surprising if the query is not answered by an overwhelming majority in the affirmative. The Labour Party has argued that whilst the private trade in arms is not the sole or even the main cause of war, the existence of private profit-making interests in armaments is a factor making for international insecurity. It would even go further than nationalisation by coupling with disarmament all round the placing of all arms and munitions factories under a world authority. Whilst such a method of dealing with the problem is scarcely to be expected in the near future, there can be no questioning the point that so long as private interests are permitted to manufacture armaments, so long will there be strong inducements for the working up of war scares. Recent revelations have disclosed the tremendous profits which armament firms have been able to glean in a trade which depends for its existence on war and rumours of war. In this connection it is not without interest to note some figures recently quoted by Dr. Addison, based on his experience at the Ministry of Munitions during the war. Saying that Britain set up its own national factories because private armament manufacturers were unable to meet the demands, he stated that although these factories were hurriedly improvised, within a few months of their establishment, they were producing 18-pounders at ten to twelve shillings apiece, whereas the average contract price, even with the most experienced armament firms, was twenty shillings, this despite the fact that the State munitions workers were paid extremely high wages. But apart from considerations of cost, the case for taking arms manufacture out of the hands of private firms is overwhelming. Admittedly, Government control of the trade would not be of great value unless at the same time there was an international convention embodying a system of licensing. But the first step is to make it impossible for private interests to amass profits from death-dealing weapons of warfare. The United States is approaching the question from the right angle. Let us hope that the example will be widely followed.

NOTES OF THE DAYPEACE AND THE SAAR

It is evident that French policy, based on the preservation of existing rights in Europe, has been burdened in recent months. Every Frenchman desires peace. What worries him is that peace is such an uneasy proposition. It is composed of fears and apprehensions, of suspicion, of preparation for a possible conflict. writes Sisley Huddleston, from Paris. Throughout the greater part of the world there is the same false kind of peace. Nearly every country in thinking of peace is disturbed by the prospect of war. And it may even be that in the end war will appear to many people as preferable to the anxieties of peace. A good deal has been done to dissipate the glamour of war. The war experience itself taught millions of men who had gone out joyously enough in the conviction that they were defending honour, home, civilisation, that war is a senseless and a vile business. The disclosures which have been made—and are still being made—of mercenary motives, of profiteering in mass murder, have added to the deep disgust. The obvious foolishness of most of the diplomacy of the world has not escaped the attention of the average intelligent man.

NO HEADWAY

But the conception of peace in its positive sense, as desirable in itself, has scarcely made headway. It is still looked upon as the mere absence of war. Peoples can perhaps be persuaded to yield a minimum to prevent war; they have not yet been asked to sacrifice the maximum in the establishment of peace. The maximum, in this connection, is simply the notion of national superiority. They believe themselves—each people—to be better than other nations. Let us look at the Saar. It is, of course, German. It was temporarily taken from Germany by way of providing compensation for France's loss in coal. That loss has been amply compensated; the Saar should now be surrendered to Germany. One would suppose that the French would be eager to hand back the Saar, in order that no territorial dispute with Germany can arise on a matter in which French claims are virtually nonexistent. Yet when the plebiscite, which normally would show an overwhelming majority of the inhabitants in favour of reintegration in the Reich, is about to be taken, French policy apparently is to induce Saarlanders, if it can be done without open intervention, to vote for the status quo, that is to say, administration by a Commission of the League of Nations. There is, of course, no hope of a vote for France, but there may be just a chance of a vote against Germany. Why?

Because the Saar enjoys various advantages under the League administration with some elements of a French economic and monetary regime, and escapes a number of liabilities and hardships which the German people are at present enduring. Suppose the Saarlanders, thinking of their coal mines, remembering the benefits of the present economic arrangements, voted for the status quo. That would, in a way, be a calamity for Europe. For it is certain that Germany would not cease to strive for the recovery of the lost province. It is virtually certain that the Saarlanders would soon repent. The possibility of a Franco-German clash would not be far-fetched. In short, a vote for the status quo in the Saar might bring war to Europe.

Now my other friend—Mr. B if you like—is a very different character. He takes life very seriously. At all events, it is interesting to analyse our friends in the role of torchbearers down the highway of evolution. What sort of people are they? How do they react to life's problems? What kind of a legacy are they preparing for posterity? Among my own friends there are two who present a strong contrast to each other and whom I regard as the typical extremes of the influential classes. One of them—I shall call him Mr. A—is "fat and forty". The most remarkable thing about him is an inordinate lust for money. In other respects he is a thoroughly good fellow. He spins a good yarn over a bottle; he is a topnotcher on the golf links; he never misses a boxing match; and he enjoys a flirtation now and then or an after-the-show carousal at "Ye Toud in th' Hole" or whatnot. But ask him what he thinks of the Balkan Dispute, and he will not stare blankly, for he is not as naive as all that, but he will contrive to reply so as to put the whole matter in a trivial light. He once confided to me, broadly and confidently, that he was sadly deficient in the arts and sciences but that he had awoken to the fact too late in life, when he no longer had the courage or application to surmount the appalling mountain of academic facts; so he had soon relapsed into his usual happy-go-lucky mode of existence, his only claim to distinction being the small fortune he was amassing.

Now my other friend—Mr. B if you like—is a very different character. He takes life very seriously.

"And you'll find that a lot safer, mamma, than that old coffee pot."

WHAT ARE YOU DOING
FOR POSTERITY?

By E. SCHROTER

What is the matter with the world to-day? This is a question that has been asked so often in late years, in one way or another, that it passes for little short of facetiousness when raised by the average man in the street. Moreover, with the science of sociology very much in its infancy and world politics showing no signs of settling down to rational principles, one might well be fearfully sceptical of the future and timid in broaching such a subject.

However, there is no reason why the least erudite among us should be discouraged from giving the matter a thought or two. On the contrary, it is a duty; for each and every one of us contributes towards the course of evolution, whether for good or otherwise. Personally, I feel like the bishop who, on visiting St. Peter's for the first time, felt his spirit swell until it filled the whole edifice; rather than like that other bishop who imagined himself dwindling away to nothingness—so greatly overawed was he.

Most of us seem to be agreed on the fact that the world is "going to the dogs". Our minds are filled with uneasiness—with all sorts of vague, but dire forebodings. And yet how many of us do anything about it? There is the usual plentiful crop of preachers and the usual dearth of altruistic souls who really get down to it. We are all so egotistically preoccupied with our own individual affairs that we leave to others the good work of worrying about what sort of a world we bequeath to our children's children, ignoring the sociological truism that the individual is best off when the community as a whole prospers. This is no doubt a literary hash to thinking people, but it probably contains a germ of novelty to many.

At all events, it is interesting to analyse our friends in the role of torchbearers down the highway of evolution. What sort of people are they? How do they react to life's problems? What kind of a legacy are they preparing for posterity? Among my own friends there are two who present a strong contrast to each other and whom I regard as the typical extremes of the influential classes.

One of them—I shall call him Mr. A—is "fat and forty". The most remarkable thing about him is an inordinate lust for money. In other respects he is a thoroughly good fellow. He spins a good yarn over a bottle; he is a topnotcher on the golf links; he never misses a boxing match; and he enjoys a flirtation now and then or an after-the-show carousal at "Ye Toud in th' Hole" or whatnot. But ask him what he thinks of the Balkan Dispute, and he will not stare blankly, for he is not as naive as all that, but he will contrive to reply so as to put the whole matter in a trivial light. He once confided to me, broadly and confidently, that he was sadly deficient in the arts and sciences but that he had awoken to the fact too late in life, when he no longer had the courage or application to surmount the appalling mountain of academic facts; so he had soon relapsed into his usual happy-go-lucky mode of existence, his only claim to distinction being the small fortune he was amassing.

Now my other friend—Mr. B if you like—is a very different character. He takes life very seriously.

ly—too seriously. He is learned and can talk brilliantly on almost any topic under the sun. His zealousness in pursuit of truth has cost him many a sleepless night and in consequence he is thin and cadaverous. He too is getting on in the world, for people look up to him as they might, in primeval times, have looked up to a medicene-man or high-priest.

Of course it takes all kinds to make a world. But, you will remember, I am in search of the type of man who is best suited to shouldering the responsibilities of life and to act as a pointer to Mother Nature when she brings new souls into the world. Now I do not think that either Mr. A or Mr. B would pass muster as such. If most of us were like Mr. A, we would soon be back in the dark ages. On the other hand, if Mr. B were the predominant pattern, the world would probably tend towards a Wellesian Utopia, true, but there is little doubt that it would be quite devoid of romance—a dully dull world.

No, I say, give me a man who sleeps at night—by all means. But let him have a healthy thirst for knowledge and the will to acquire it despite the dryness of the rudimentary "first steps". For, having got so far along the path of enlightenment, man must continue, stagnation or retrogression would soon spell disaster to the bulk of mankind. But let him, above all things, cultivate a spirit of adventure—that miraculous attitude of the mind that adds zest to every act in life, whether great or little, and which preserves a sane outlook whether he be on the pinnacle of success and vigorous health or in the doldrums of adversity and illness.

I am tempted to put this forward as a panacea for most of the social ills of the world. One meets this spirit, once in a while, but it is all too rare. It is like a draft of ozone from an Alpine mountainside. It temporarily infuses even the melancholic with its tonic effects. And it is usually found with all that is best in mind and body; for, when it is the guiding spirit in a person's life, nature can work untrammelled in eliminating the poisons of mind and body, as she does under the cover of sound, healthful sleep. The cynic, or pseudo-cynic, may be inclined to smile tolerantly, but those who have experienced the throes of mental depression know only too well the value of the kind of auto-suggestion I am hinting at.

This spirit, which I call the spirit of adventure, which banishes petty worry, sex oppression and all the other crabby traits of the average city dweller, is not necessarily a natural characteristic of a few fortunate individuals. Psychologists tell us it can be acquired by anyone who is not a confirmed pessimist. Have we not, among others, the example of Heine, whose genius flourished during the weight years of living death that terminated his life? Let a man but make up his mind, first thing in the morning, to be cheerful every minute of the day and to treat consciously everything that befalls as part of the great adventure of life itself, and he is in a fair way to discovering the elixir of spiritual youthfulness. He will soon find himself pulling with nature instead of against her, as so many do. And if this is not a "good thing" for posterity, what is?

The Very Idea!
THE IMPATIENT
PATIENT

By Edward "Sore-bones" Kelly
CLAD in bandages and his night-shirt, Mr. Edward Kelly, the well-known motorist, writes this week's "Very Idea" from the depths of his bed in the Kowloon Hospital. Mr. Kelly's story is simply told. Last week a shady tree sheltered palpitating peters along the Farling Road. Last week also, Mr. Kelly was the proud possessor of a motor-car. This week there is neither tree nor car. Now read on.

WE feel surgery all over. To think that, only a week ago we were going to write wisecracks about Hongkong doctors!

Dr. Smalley may be going to operate on us but we don't want to be his meat.

Still they're an hospital crowd here.

Dozens of sisters and nurses crowding around us all day making us feel at home with their bottles; doctors sticking old-fashioned photographs to our chests while we say "ninety-nine"; and wardmen warding off all kinds of disease such as pneumonia, neuritis, pneuritis and pneuritis.

Also tonsillitis, bronchitis, peritonitis, alcoholitis and their lights too numerous to mention.

Since we were admitted here we have become very keen on Nurses-on-hospital.

We heartily recommend them to anyone who wants a change.

After all, the young man of Hongkong cannot afford to take risks, where his health is concerned.

Play ducks and drakes with your health and you'll find yourself in the hands of the quacks.

Actually there's no difficulty about getting into hospital. The only hard work is the getting out part.

We know several simple ways of getting in.

Some people swear by mosquito bites, but a simpler way is to sock a police officer on the jaw.

Personally we preferred the motor car method.

We were just waking up when they brought us in to Doc. Smalley.

"Tim!" he said, "very GRAVE!"

We were sore. Didn't know whether he referred to our condition or destination.

We spat out three or four teeth and groaned.

"We must remove his foibles," said someone.

One of the dispensers hit us over the head and we gradually lost consciousness.

When we awoke we were in bed. We don't know yet whether they have taken our foibles, but they have pinched our pants.

We are on the road to recovery now, thank you, and are allowed to take slight nourishment.

For tiffin to-day they gave us some hot water that tasted strangely of chicken.

To-morrow, the doctor tells us, we may go on our usual diet. We are too ill to send out for some, but securely packed bottles may be sent to us through the post office.

In any case, rum up and see us sometime!

DUMB-BELLES LETTRES

by Juliet Lowell

Second World War!

Honolulu Golf Club.
Gentlemen:

I note that I am indebted to you for the sum of $4.40 for monthly dues, special assessment and some sort of an additional racket that you call a war tax. I suppose I will have to pay this in spite of the fact that I have never yet set foot on the so-called golf links, nor been inside the so-called club house.

Now I do not object to this at all. It makes me feel a deeper personal interest in the golf club, and by the time I have had to dig up a few more assessments I may become sufficiently interested to visit the place. If I should decide to play a round or two as a result of my newly stimulated interest and curiosity, the committee would regret ever having awakened such interest—and another assessment would be required at once for repairing the grounds.

But this war tax racket gets my goat. It may be alright to fool the majority of the people that way but I have discovered by judicious inquiry that the WAR HAS BEEN OVER for a number of years. Being interested chiefly in golf, you gentlemen may not have heard the news, but I assure you it is authentic. You see I am in the newspaper game and have to keep well informed as to world events. The last war is over and the next one has not yet started, so where in hell is the sense of levying a war tax? They are not using our golf links for a battle ground, are they? I think we are being gyped and suggest that you take the matter up with Mr. Roosevelt who ought to know whether we are in war or not.

Sincerely and practically yours,
P. K. Makino.

PITIFUL POVERTY OF HONGKONG

half of the new cases dealt with during the year. In 1933, new cases of the Society were able to secure medical attention for children, and in this branch of activity the co-operation of the Government Infant Welfare Centres in Wanchai and Kowloon was invaluable.

Poverty appeared as the factor in 818 cases dealt with by the Society during the year, and in 748 of these milk or other food was provided. The Society has during the year secured 45 hawkers' licences for parents and in all branches of its work it alleviates the sufferings of mother and child.

SLUM PROBLEM

The Society is slowly uprooting in homes here and there the old fatalistic complacency with things as they are, and implanting in its place a new attitude towards dirt and disease, which, when clearances begin, will be of immense value to those who are endeavouring the bring about the improvement.

It is a matter for satisfaction that the number of cases in which wanton ill-treatment features is very small. His Excellency the Governor, in addressing the Society at the Annual Meeting last year called attention to this fact, and this year's experience endorses his remarks. In only one case during the year was it found that the circumstances warranted prosecution, although efforts to ensure the future welfare of the children concerned, either by arranging for their removal to a safe environment or for supervision, were necessary on several occasions. In this branch of the Society's work your Committee cannot speak too highly of the unfailing sympathy and co-operation of the officers of the Secretariat for Chinese Affairs. Only those who are in close contact with the work of the senior officers, of Sub-Inspector Fraser and of the women inspectors of the Secretariat can sufficiently appreciate the value of their efforts on behalf of the more unfortunate children of the Colony.

APPEAL FOR FUNDS

The Committee has unfortunately to report a deficiency of $2,417.73 on the year's working. While expenditure for the year, at $23,258.55, showed a decrease of $1,394.68 on the corresponding figure for the previous year, income declined by $3,517.12 to $20,840.82.

Within the last five years the Society has dealt with 3,110 cases affecting the welfare of 5,938 children. Its deficit on the past three years' working amounts to $6,926.11. Your Committee are confident that their appeal for extended financial support during the coming year will meet with a generous response.

BRITISH FORCE FOR SAAR

MAIN BODY LEAVES NEXT WEEK

London, Dec. 13. Major General Brind, who is to command the International Force in the Saar, left London to-day, when he was seen off by General Sir A. Montgomery Massingberd, Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

General Brind will reach Saarbrücken to-morrow. An advance party of British officers arrived there to-day. The main body will proceed via Calais next week.

The last time a force of this size went to the Continent their purpose was to make war. Their object now is to keep peace.—British Wireless.

FLYING RIGHTS

AN ANGLO-FRENCH UNDERSTANDING

London, Dec. 13. The Under Secretary for Air, Sir Philip Sassoon, referring in the House of Commons to the Anglo-French negotiations regarding the operation of Imperial Air Services across French territory, said a formal agreement had not yet been concluded, but a provisional understanding had been arrived at, which, subject to the elucidation of certain details, he had every reason to hope would lead to an agreement at an early date.—British Wireless.

IN WIRELESS TOUCH

The following ships are expected to be in wireless communication with Hongkong to-day:—Van Heutze, Conto Verde, Kiyosumi Maru, Haiyang, President Jefferson, Taiyuan, Ranpara, Chakasang, Michigan, Zulderkerk.

ANGLO-FRENCH AMITY

UNITED IN CAUSE OF PEACE

London, Dec. 13. The French Foreign Minister, M. Laval, has sent a telegram to Sir John Simon expressing his gratification at the close collaboration between the British and French Governments, which during the recent session of the League Council, had no effectively served the cause of justice and peace.

In reply Sir John Simon expressed the hope that Anglo-French collaboration which had been so fruitful at Geneva would be continued and developed, with results always as fruitful and with equal benefit to world peace.—British Wireless.

"TELEGRAPH" ART SUPPLEMENT

Topical Pictures To-morrow

To-morrow's issue of the Telegraph Pictorial Supplement will again contain a varied selection of pictures of topical interest.

Weddings illustrated will be those of Mr. John Davidson and Miss M. B. Stonebridge, and of Mr. William Kew and Miss Angelina Ng.

Amongst sporting pictures will be a group of the Committee of the Kowloon Riding Club, pictures of the senior and junior basketball teams of Wah Yan College, and students of the Young Chung Girls' School in physical exercise.

Other photos will show a group of Roman Catholic dignitaries photographed in connection with the Nazareth Mission golden jubilee, and officers and men of the Italian cruiser Quarto lying a wreath on the Cenotaph.

NO VIOLATION OF "OPEN DOOR" PACT

TUNGSTEN SALES TO BRITISH INTERESTS

Nanking, Dec. 14. It is authoritatively learned that the report that Mr. Ariyoshi, Japanese Minister to China, had lodged a protest with the Nanking Foreign Office against the exclusive sale of tungsten to British interests by the Hunan Government, is unfounded.

It is explained in Chinese official circles that such action taken by the Hunan Government does not constitute a violation of the "open door" policy or equal opportunity principles.—Central News.

JAPANESE POLITICS

LEADING MEMBERS DESERT SEIYUKAI PARTY

Tokyo, Dec. 13. The Seiyukai Party, one of the leading political parties in Japan, is showing signs of disintegration. The process of disintegration was speeded to-day by the announced desertion of the party of Mr. Akiba, a leading Seiyukai member in the Japanese Diet. He said that he was dissatisfied with the policies of the Seiyukai Party.

It is expected that some other influential members will follow his example of deserting the party.—Central News Agency.

and, perhaps, finish amongst the placed ponies.

The first race will be the December Handicap and I think the issue will be between Cossack's Beauty and Helman. I prefer the chances of the latter. King's Warden, I think, will be good enough to collect the third prize.

BARRIER REEF HANDICAP

Barrier Reef Handicap. Can Portin repeat his gallip of the last time? If so, I think she will win this race. High Finance—I started here in preference to the Queenstand Champions—has an outstanding chance. I would make him the winner but for his bad behaviour at the starting gate. He invariably gets left and for this reason his chances are discounted. Empire Day appeals as an each way proposition. Dinty may find the weight too much and the distance too far to be dangerous.

TARY HANDICAP

Tary Handicap. A good race and a good dividend should be paid out in this race. There are a number of ponies with winning chances. I think, however, Don and Ribble show up best. I am inclined to support Ribble but only half-heartedly as I know how very dangerous Don will prove himself to be. I pick Valorous for the third position, but I can see considerable danger coming from Racing Boy, Wayward Stag and Wonderful Stag.

Dilatory Plate. On his Macao running, Sandy Bay should win this race. For placings I look to Great Hall and Solar Star to fill the positions.

Finale Plate. If Little Beauty elects to start here, we need not look further for the winner. In his absence, I like the chances of Soldier of Fortune with Ironsides for the second and Hell for Leather for the third place.

CHINESE MISSION

SEES DEVELOPMENTS OF BRITISH AVIATION

London, Dec. 13. Mr. Mao Tenz-chu, leader of the Chinese Department of Communications Mission to Britain, when interviewed by Reuter to-day, expressed his warmest appreciation of the kindness and assistance received everywhere.

Under the guidance of officers specially assigned by the Air Ministry he has been everything from the earliest stages of the flyingman to the complicated manoeuvres and dare-devil acrobatics of Royal Air Force high-speed pilots.

Although deferring his conclusions till the end of the whole tour, Mr. Mao said that he would retain vivid impressions of the perfection of British aviation. Particularly was he impressed with the research work of the Farnborough Station.

He went up in an amphibian plane, which he described as the most useful machine, at Calshot. Also, he made a flight in an autogiro, and seemed a little uncertain of its suitability for war; but he said that it seemed calculated to popularise civilian flying.

Mr. Mao and other members of the Mission also visited the chief aeroplane factories. They were most popular wherever they went.

The Chinese party leaves for Italy to-day. Afterwards they will return to China, via the United States.—Reuter.

ABLE AMAZON AND SOLDIER OF BRITAIN FOR THE AUTUMN CHAMPIONS

LOCAL CRICKET NOTES

THE ARMY'S CHALLENGE IN THE SHIELD COMPETITION

VASTLY IMPROVED TEAM

(By R. Abbit)

There was a reasonable full programme in the Senior League last Saturday, and with a bit of fortune all three games might have been finished, for Craigengower came very close to beating Recreio, while either side might have won at King's Park, if one or two incidents had a different outcome. As it is, the Army alone seem to have the slightest chance of giving the Club a run for their money in the Shield Competition. There are two features in the advance of Army Cricket.

They have practically no new players except de Pritchard (I hope I shall discover an alternative designation, as the printer isn't going to get that right all through the season), but they have shaken down into a real team of regular players, some of whom have improved vastly this season; and, in the second place, they are up against less severe opposition in many cases. The Club and the Navy are, so far as I can see, the only two teams whose form has not deteriorated for the time being. The issue of the Club and Army game on January 19 will make a tremendous difference to the probabilities. We shall have a dress-rehearsal of this on Boxing Day.

LAY'S CENTURY

Ever since Arthur Lay attempted to commit mayhem upon me with a nibbler for my innocent reference to his censure at Fanning, I have been wondering if he would repeat the performance on the cricket field; and I have been fortunate enough personally to see him equal his score at the hillside-ground to grass which he effects on Sundays. Curiously enough his century was not a typical "Lay" hurricane. He did indeed drive powerfully, but he was indulging frequently in extremely pretty square cuts, and shots to the covers. After he had reached seventy he became—for him—slow, partly from taking extra care, I suspect, and partly owing to the fact that the Navy had set out a very deep "having" field. However, he hit anything loose very hard, and reached the coveted century. Meanwhile Teddy Fincher had proceeded sedately to a pretty sixty before he was bowled in trying to hit. After that it is true that the K.C.C. batsmen were in a hurry, but the fact remains that E. F. Fincher and Robert Lee both played at the first balls they respectively received and were bowled neck and crop. As a matter of fact Benart, who was the sixth bowler tried, bowled uncommonly well as he usually swung in late with his ball on or just outside the off stump, while, if he did not swing, the ball broke appreciably from the off. In fact he might have got several more wickets save that he did a bit too much and bent the leg stick as well as the bat. I shall be most interested to see if he can reproduce this form, (a) on grass, and (b) with any old wind or none! If he can, he is one of the bowlers the Navy wants so badly. F. Zimmerer got nineteen not out and I hope it is the beginning of a recovery of form for him. Still 1/147 and 7/186 is pretty mouldy. I think a few more of these tiffin parties are indicated. Verb. Sap.

THAT MATTING

I have for sometime said that the Navy ought to do something about that matting. I admit it is not easy to get the full eight-foot width, nor to keep it steadily at a tension stretch. But it ought to be stopped at the popping crease. As it is you don't give the bowlers a chance of playing the front foot on turf, and you have all this summery of taking guard with a bit of chalk. Besides, if what I am told is true, it caused an accident last Saturday as a batsman snicked the ball down very hard on to a back securing pin and it flicked up like lightning to split Holland-Martin's chin. I recollect knocking Ponsonby-Fane out like that in the days (Consult Phases) when I used to bowl fast, only in that case it was a very wide ball that took an outside peg on a narrow matting strip in the season when C.S.C.C. used this type of wicket. There is no doubt that the most satisfactory type of matting wicket is the eight-foot strip pegged at the popping crease.

AN EXCITING FINISH

Who the Submarine drafting officer is I don't know, but we owe him a debt of gratitude for sending Bramwell out here. He looks like a batsman from the word go, which is more than most people, except Alec Pearce, do these days. He has a beautifully straight bat, the position of his right elbow in a perfect example for any young batsman (only make it "left" elbow for a right-hander), while he hits the ball tremendously hard. His footwork makes it clear that he has plenty of time to watch the ball and that he uses it right on to the bat. His forty-five was a delightful knock, though it was hard lines on Willie Hung to get that extra two inches of break on only to see a chance put down in the slips! Parker-Smith's batting though not so polished was very useful, and when Holland-Martin and Hargreaves got together I thought the Navy would get the run. However, Hung, who seems to discard his spine when fielding, pounced on one at full speed and hesitation saw the Free Forester run out. Hargreaves, however, took up the running and though his dearest friend would not call him a pretty bat he began to get runs at an amazing pace considering that he has a very limited reach. But when he went all was over and K.C.C. were not too far (Continued on Page 9.)

M.C.C. Team For West Indies

LEAVING LONDON TO-MORROW

The following members of the M.C.C. team, with the exception of Hendren, who has already arrived at the scene of the tour, will leave London for the West Indies to-morrow.

R. E. S. Wyatt (captain), Paime and Hollies (Warwickshire), E. R. T. Holmes (Surrey), D. C. H. Townsend (Oxford University), K. Farnes (Essex), W. E. Harbord and Leyland (Yorkshire), Hendren and Smith (J.) (Middlesex); Hammond (Gloucestershire), Ames (Kent), Iddon and Farrimond (Lancashire).

Captain G. W. Carlton Levick will accompany the team as honorary manager and four Test matches are included in the tour. The party of 14 has been completed by the selection of W. E. Harbord and Iddon. C. F. Walters, of Worcestershire, was among the first chosen, but on medical advice he had to decline the tour.

CAER CLARK NEEDLE MATCH

H.K. LADIES AND ST. ANDREW'S

CIVILIANS TRIAL

To-morrow the Hongkong Ladies, Champions of the Caer Clark Cup Tourney since its inception, will meet St. Andrew's in a needle game on the Marina ground at 2.45 p.m. and they will be represented by: B. Hance; E. M. Gray, J. Smalley; N. McKella, B. Pope, E. Helbling; W. Marsh, P. M. Harrop, J. Churchill, C. Ferguson and A. Jacks.

The H. K. Ladies second team meet the C.B.A. at Sookpoo at 3 p.m. and will be represented by: E. Barker; M. Wolf; R. Smalley; O'Hagen; M. Bennett; H. Hance; J. Flex; J. Locke; E. Bonner; M. Ratney and V. Blackburn.

CIVILIANS v. REST

The Civilians' hockey team which is to meet the Combined Services, Sunday, defeated the Rest by two goals to one in a trial match played on the Police Training School ground yesterday afternoon. A feature of the game, which was played at a fast pace, was the splendid combination of the selected team's forward line. Several changes were noticed. Karnal Singh and J. Gonsalves played at back for the Civilians in the absence of P. V. Wong and E. V. Reed. C. Parker, of the Police, who was selected to play at right-half but cannot owing to a Police football League game on Sunday, played at right-half for the Rest, while A. S. Bliss replaced Parker. In place of C. Pile on the right wing for the Rest, Rulla Khan, also of the Police, was played.

It is a pity that Parker cannot appear in the final game. He played a remarkable game in defence yesterday. His place is being taken by Bliss, who has been finally selected.

The Civilians were attacking from the initial bully-off, the forward line combining well, especially Mackay, Divett and Gurbachan Singh. Their first goal came as the result of a penalty bully against Parker for obstruction. Gurbachan Singh took the bully and placed the ball in the net.

In the second half Awtar Singh equalised for the Rest as the result of a corner hit. Sousa, in goal, was unshaken. Towards the end of the game, Moss, in goal for the Rest, brought off many good saves. He saved in quick succession from Divett and G. Singh. Pinto missed an open goal.

The Civilians obtained their second goal through Divett. Moss cleared a shot from G. Singh but did not hit it well away. Mackay obtained possession and passed to Divett, who scored.

The Civilians are meeting the Services on the Marina No. 1 ground on Sunday, bully-off 3 p.m. sharp, and will be represented by the following team—U. B. Sousa; F. V. Wong and E. V. Reed; A. S. Bliss; W. A. Reed (Capt.), and E. L. Gosano; N. A. E. Mackay, G. E. R. Divett, Gurbachan Singh, J. M. Pinto and A. P. Sousa.

CAVALCADE SHOULD WIN SUB: GRIFFINS EVENT

LAST MEETING OF SEASON

(By "Captain Foster")

To-morrow's meeting closes our racing season for the year and, on the whole, I think we have had a good season. I do not expect to see any "outsider" come romping home and paying a handsome dividend, but we should be treated to a very good race in the Tardy Handicap, confined to "C" Clas ponies.

The three Autumn Champions come up for decision. Able Amazon stands out in a class all by herself, and she should have no difficulty in winning the Queensland Autumn Champions. At one time I thought we would see a small field in this race, but I am glad to hear that there will be at least eight starters, more runners if riders are available.

Certain Starters are: Able Amazon, Butler, Australian Boy, Pih? Big Tor, Davis, High Finance, P. P. Botelho, Just That, Deitz, Night Star, Black? Racing Heart, Heard, Saucy Face, Ip Kui Ying and the following are eligible to start—Alacrity, Atlas, Bobniak Star, Nell Gwyn, Portia and St. Joan.

SOLDIER OF BRITAIN

Big Tor should fill second place, and I expect Racing Heart to occupy the third position. I see no danger in the others except that both Just That and Saucy Face will run well and finish close up, but I cannot see either of them run into a place.

The line up for the Professional Cup and Subscription Griffins'

Champions will consist of the following—Cavalcade, Pih, Classic Hall, Heard, Copper Idol, Davis, Little Beauty, Fung? Soldier of Fortune, F. F. Li, St. Ives, Deitz, The Bodega, Pan, Tiny Star, Butler, Young Chap, P. P. Botelho

CAVALCADE SHOULD WIN

On his last running in the Sub: St. Leger, Cavalcade should win the Champions, but I have a wholesome respect for Young Chap after his great run at Macao last Sunday, when he was beaten a short head by Sandy Bay in the South China Cup in the first time of 2-04. I thought he was an unlucky loser, as he was travelling much the faster of the two at the finish of that race. If the pony can reproduce the same form to-morrow he will make Cavalcade go all the way. We should, however, be treated to a good finish, and I have an open mind as to the result. Classic Hall, Copper Idol and Tiny Star should make a fight of it for the third position but I cannot see any one of them upsetting form by being returned the winner.

The probable contenders for the Hongkong Autumn Champions will be—

Gladiator, Fung? King's Justice, Heard, Sadko, Pih

Soldier of Britain, Deitz, a small but select field. Soldier of Britain should again score, and I expect to see win very easily. It's a toss up between Sadko and King's Justice for the second place. If Sadko finds his best form, I think he will have the better of the argument, and finish ahead of King's Justice. There is, however, practically nothing in it between these two ponies as one has beaten the other as many times as he has been beaten. Gladiator ran a sterling good pony in the Hongkong St. Leger and if he starts in this race I shall not be surprised to see him give a good account of himself (Continued on Page 7.)

RACE TRAINING TIMES

EXCELLENT FIGURES RETURNED THIS MORNING

Some excellent times were returned by ponies over the half and quarter mile gallops at Happy Valley this morning. Able Amazon, who is favoured by our Racing Correspondent for the Queensland Autumn Champions on Saturday when the last meeting of the season is to be held, clocked in at 27 secs. on the last quarter, while Soldier of Britain also finished strongly at 28 secs. over the last quarter.

Below are this morning's official times:

off winning. As a matter of fact had two slip catches been held—Bramwell and Hargreaves both early on—I think they would have pulled the match off. After their first five men the Navy batting was not so good.

THE NEW BOWLER

It is of course not strictly accurate to say that A. P. Pereira is a new bowler, but he has leapt into prominence when Recreio entered the first Division this season, and I strongly suspect that his figures—though this proves nothing—are better than those any bowler can show so far. Last Saturday, with no support from any other trundler on his side, he so set the Cricketers' batsmen back on their sticks that they only got to a hundred and thirty-two very late, and so could not declare. His figures of 14-2-3-27-6 speak for themselves, and he, with P.M.N. da Silva, are the two who saved the side. Omar made a sensational return, bowling with all his old skill (16-4-21-61) and nearly pulled things off. But they had left it too late, although it is difficult to see how an earlier declaration could have been made. F. R. Zimmern got ninety-three. These Zimmerns are becoming nearly as difficult as the Lees—(by the way I see Tinker Lee has returned to the fold after some experiments in the dog-fight game)—and I shall have to get some labels for them. "P.I." I know, and "E" I know, but I am for the moment defeated by F.R.

THE ARMY WIN

It is very interesting to note that, while it was definitely reported in the Press that the I.R.C. lost on the last ball but one of the day, the Army—in two places—have gone out of their way to assure me that there were three minutes to go, which would have meant one (or two perhaps) overs more. I don't know if there was any actual divergence of opinion. If so, it is just as well that the match finished when it did! The I.R.C. certainly did their best to win as they put the Army in. However, either the Army bats were on top form or Minu was a bit off colour (I was told he was out of luck and was turning the ball if anything too much) and they made a very good start. They put up sixty in thirty-five minutes, but after that five wickets fell and the total was only eighty-nine. Pritchard, however was told to have a go, and did so to some purpose, as he hit two very nice sixes off Minu in successive overs. Walsh also got going and, after batting for an hour and a half, Garthwaite declared at 155, leaving the I.R.C. just five minutes longer than that to get the runs. Thanks to Garthwaite (4/34) and that much improved bowler Ballard (4/46 not 5/45), they won the game.

NO CAUSE FOR DESPONDENCY

The I.R.C. are having a very poor time just now and I trust it will not upset them too much. They have had bad luck. Admittedly rather weak now in batting, the loss of A. H. Madar has been a cruel blow to them. Then again, I think their skipper, Frank Pereira, has not been in the best of health recently, he was unwell at Shanghai, and could not play the week before this. To command success a fast bowler, more than any one else, must be at the top of his physical form. I sincerely trust Pereira will be fit for the rest of the season. To my mind, they have cause for optimism in the success of their new first pair, A. R. Abina and A. S. Safford. Both are youngsters, I am told, and the I.R.C. have now to do a bit of team building on them. With the excellent second eleven they have it should not be difficult.

HELD OVER

Crickets in the Senior Division has been so interesting that I have outrun my space and must hold other matches over until to-morrow when I hope to publish a supplementary article, in which I also want to refer to certain events in the cricket world at home.

TO-MORROW'S GAMES

The Senior Division is not very heavily engaged to-morrow. The most interesting game will be between the K.C.C. at home and the Hongkong Club. Barring the traditional aspects of cricket, the only question is whether they can make a draw of it. If the Club but first, K.C.C. may do so, but I hardly think otherwise if the Club are at full strength. But of course, K.C.C. may stage a come-back. I

UNITED SERVICES GOLF

R.A.M.C. Win Annual Competition

The United Services Inter-unit Golf competition held at Fanling yesterday was won by the Royal Army Service Corps team, comprising Lieut. Col. M. J. Williamson, Major C. F. W. Grellier, Major J. Wren and Capt. Trimble, with a score of 34 down.

The handicap competition was won by a team from H.M.S. Kent with a score of 31 down. The inter-unit competition resulted: R.A.M.C., 34 down. H.M.S. Medway, 39 down. H.M.S. Suffolk, 39 down. Inter-unit Handicap competition: H.M.S. Kent, 11 down. R.E. and R.C. of S., 12 down. R.A.M.C., 13 down.

The annual Lawn Tennis Tournament in connection with the Hongkong Cricket Club will commence on March 4, and as in former years there will be open for competition to all players who are resident in the Colony and members of Club affiliated with the H.K.L.T.A. Men's Championship Singles and Doubles competitions.

Lee Wai-tong, and Miss Ellen Tso entered the Second Round of the open Mixed Doubles Lawn Tennis Championship by defeating T. A. Pearce, and Miss H. Hancock by 6-4, 8-6. The winners will now meet L. Goldman and Miss R. Hancock.

Messrs. A. S. Watson & Co., Ltd., issue a most attractive calendar, with a coloured representation of racing greyhounds.

Fancy the Navy will have the better of it against the Civil Service, while of the two friendlies, Recreio should beat the Press—unless F. Pereira and A. H. Rumjahn desert the I.R.C.—while the I.R.C. and C.C.C. match should be interesting.

In the Second Division H.K.C.C. and the Navy should win their League matches, and I.R.C. and Police their friendlies.

RETURNING ON JANUARY 10

(By "Ringsider")

Seaman Barry, of H.M.S. Berwick, holder of the Welter-weight championship of China, who delighted local boxing fans in several contests staged in the Colony last year, is returning to Hongkong on January 10.

So confident is Mr. A. E. Ainsworth, Inspector on the Star Ferry, of Barry's ability that he told me yesterday that he was prepared to back Barry for $1,000 against any welter-weight or middle-weight in a fight in the Colony.

Barry returned home with the Berwick when she left earlier in the year for re-fit and re-commissioning.

Seaman Barry

tion and has rejoined the ship again for service on the China Station.

While at home he has been doing well at the game according to a letter received to Mr. Ainsworth from Barry. He has to his credit a decision against Stoker Reynolds, who was matched against Jack Hood, holder of the Welter-weight Championship of Great Britain in 1926-32-33, and also a verdict against Pat Haley, conqueror of Harry Mason.

Barry is also able to take a light-weight contest.

Barry won the Championship of China at Shanghai last year when he defeated Johnny Hill on points.

China To Be Invited To Participate

Tokyo, Dec. 13. The Nichi Nichi states that, complying with the request of Senor Manuel Quezon, President, and of Dr. Getulio Vargas, Vice-President, of the Amateur Athletic Association of the Orient, who are due to arrive here aboard the President Coolidge, the Japan Athletic Federation are arranging a committee, meeting at Tokyo for to-morrow.

The meeting will discuss the organisation of the first Oriental Championship Games which are to be held in Tokyo in 1938 and also the legalisation of the Federation's constitution.

The Manchukuo delegate will travel to Tokyo by air. The Japan Athletic Federation will submit a proposal to invite China as a member country.

It will be remembered that the Japan Athletic Federation severed relations with the China Athletic Federation following the dissolution of the Far Eastern Athletic Federation in May, 1934, because of China's refusal to admit Manchukuo.—Reuter.

SERIAL STORY

The Clue Of The Forgotten Murder:

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Griff frowned at Bleeker. "You continually revert to the material," he said. "You see things objectively. I prefer to see them subjectively. I prefer to turn back the hands of time and to reason what is going to happen from a philosophic contemplation of what has happened. I repeat that. Bleeker, Malone was beautiful, that her beauty was of the type that makes for misery. It is the flame in which the moth pines himself and it is such a pathetic thing that usually the flame from this beauty sings the wings of the beauty itself."

"And she been, perhaps, a little more discreet, had it not been for this uncontrolled flame which swept through her very being, she could have gone far. And she not gone through suffering she might have retained her beauty. Women do that, you know—women who have that sensual, physical type of beauty. It is retained and with the passing of years and the gathering of wisdom it ripens into a warm vitality which lasts them well into middle age. But so often that type of beauty, recking nothing of consequences, sweeps all before it in its mad rush to have the demands of youth, and there comes suffering."

"And mark you this, my friend. Suffering and beauty do not go together. There is a certain type of ethereal beauty which is perhaps developed by suffering—rather it is a cold, spiritual something, the type of beauty which one admires in a snow-capped peak which is illuminated by moonlight. But it is not the type of beauty one embraces, and after all, since woman is what she is, the only type of beauty that she cares for is the beauty that is embraced. No, my friend, suffering and beauty do not go together."

Bleeker's tone was unympathetic. "Go on," he said. "Show yourself a good time. You think you've discovered something I've overlooked. It makes you feel superior. You're nervous and your nervousness makes you want to talk and keep on talking. I'm just a target for your talk. Go ahead and talk! Don't mind me. Hell, I'm just the guy who hired you! I don't count."

Griff's tone was pained. "Please," he said, "help me. I am not talking for the sake of talking. You cannot understand murder unless you can understand the things which have led to that murder. There is nothing so important as an appreciation of motive. By the way, mean appreciation of the emotional backgrounds of all the persons concerned. You cannot detect murder until you can judge it. You cannot judge it until you can understand it. That which might well incite one person to murder would cause only a mild irritation in another."

Griff ceased speaking and Bleeker frowned and turned away. Bleeker's manner was that of one who deliberately ignores a situation he cannot control. After several moments he spoke.

"When you are ready to talk facts," he said, "I want to listen. In the meantime, consider you're talking to yourself, not to me. I don't give a damn about your philosophy. I want facts."

Griff sighed, the sigh of one who has laid his innermost thoughts in an attempt to make an explanation, which when it is expressed has become no explanation at all, but merely a further ground of misunderstanding.

The cab came to a stop. "This," said Griff, "is the hotel where Mary Briggs is registered under the name of Stella Mockley. Or perhaps her real name is Stella Mockley and the name that she gave the police was one which was assumed for the occasion."

"At least," Bleeker said with more than a trace of impatience in his tone as he thrust a bill into the outstretched hand of the cab driver, "we will get something definite here, not merely a mass of philosophies and theories."

"We are," Griff admitted, "approaching the end of our chase. Soon we will have all of the straws in our hands and then we can see the direction in which those straws are pointed—a direction which Malone must have deduced from only the single straw which we know was in his possession. It is uncanny, it is, in short, unbelievable. It is still think there must have been something of luck that entered into it, although, when one sees it, it is so absolutely plain that one wonders it did not crash home to the consciousness long before. That is the way with vital things. They are usually simple, usually plainly visible, camouflaged only by the lack of vision in the mind of the beholder."

Bleeker, apparently without flinching, pushed on past the criminologist and barged through the swinging door of the hotel.

"Caution," Griff whispered. "Let us not rush in here, my friend. It is too late!"

Griff paused by the doorway. Bleeker looked, followed the direction of his gaze, and also paused. A big man with stooped shoulders was standing talking with a man at the desk. Bleeker's eyes squinted for a moment in an attempt to refresh his memory. Then he muttered in an undertone, "It's Charles Fisher—Mrs. Cathay's lawyer."

"Over this way quickly," said the criminologist. "Perhaps he hasn't seen us yet."

He stepped behind a potted palm, dragging the publisher with him.

The two men stood motionless. Fisher did not once glance in their direction but finished his conversation with the man at the desk. He stood for a moment, apparently undecided, then, flinging his chin up as one does when reaching a decision to plunge boldly into some unwelcome situation, he strode toward the elevators.

Griff squeezed the publisher's elbow. "Quick," he said, "We can't give him the advantage."

The two men crossed the hotel lobby, their feet pounding the flugged floor with quick impatience. Their gait was almost a run. An elevator door slid open. Two women and a man got out. Fisher stepped in. The elevator operator looked out toward the lobby in a perfunctory survey and then placed his left hand on the door, preparatory to sliding it shut.

Griff gave a shrill whistle. The startled elevator operator looked at the two men hurrying across the lobby.

"Hold it," said Griff. The elevator boy held the door open.

Fisher, who had been staring at the toes of his shoes in frowning concentration, looked up with annoyance stamped on his countenance. The annoyance gave place to surprise, the surprise to a friendly smile, and then he smiled faded, as an expression of annoyance once more came across his features.

"Well, well," he said, "It's Mr. Griff and Bleeker, publisher of The Blade. How are you gentlemen? You're going up?"

"Yes," said Griff, and pushed his way in the elevator, shaking hands with the attorney.

The elevator boy slid the door shut. "Ninth floor," said the lawyer.

"Ninth for us," Griff said. The elevator shot upward.

"What brings you to the city?" asked Griff.

"Oh, just a matter of routine business. I've got to see about taking the deposition of a witness in a will case. Wasn't it unfortunate about poor Frank... Cathay, you know?"

"Indeed it was," Griff said. "Apparently there was poison administered."

The lawyer shook his head. "I'm afraid," he said, "it is a very serious matter."

"You don't think it was suicide?" asked Griff.

The elevator slid to a smooth stop at the ninth floor. The operator opened the door. The lawyer was awaiting as he stepped into the corridor.

"No," he said slowly. "I don't think that it was suicide. However, I am not a lawyer. I am a witness."

Just what it was and I doubt if you can ever prove that it was not suicide."

"You'll make the attempt?" Griff asked, standing in the corridor.

"It depends," Fisher said with a burst of frankness. "There's no particular secret about it. The feelings of the widow, of course, are concerned. There is, so to speak, the honour of the family. Those things are sentimental matters but, more than that, there may be a very material cash consideration involved. There was life insurance of something like $500,000. The insurance policies provided that in the event of a death by accidental means the amount of the policies would be doubled."

"You mean," Griff asked, "if it should happen Cathay took poison accidentally it would make a difference of $500,000 to his estate?"

(To Be Continued.)

Charles Fisher explains the term, "death by accidental means," in the next instalment.

CHRISTMAS SHOW

"ALADDIN" AT THE HELENA MAY INSTITUTE

Yesterday evening, Hongkong children were entertained by a delightful pantomime, "Aladdin," at the Helena May Institute. The hall was crowded with children and their parents who enthusiastically applauded the antics of Abdullah (Jack Grenham). For the third year in succession, Mrs. O. C. Womack has turned her little son to a Christmas pantomime for the children of the Colony. The "Three Bears" of 1932, the "Knave of Hearts" of 1933 and this year's "Aladdin" will long be remembered. The entire dialogue of "Aladdin" has been cleverly written. The play was produced by Mrs. Womack and Mr. Oscar Eager. Newcomers to this year's pantomime are Mrs. Reiss, the Misses M. King, E. Gray, A. Owen-Hughes and Messrs. D. L. Strellett and D. M. Richards. Many old favourites, however, were again to be seen last night, including Mrs. Womack, Mr. Jack Grenham and Mr. Oscar Eager.

Topical Allusions

Throughout the play there were many topical allusions to Hongkong: the Central British School, the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, Kobza, the photographer, H. B. Beer, the M. C. L. Bazaar and our still non-existent Lido being cleverly referred to.

The first scene opens in a Baghdad bazaar revealing Aladdin (Margaret King), his mother Amina (Evelyn Gray) and their old friend, Abdullah (Oscar Eager). In due course, certain tourists appear including Mr. D. L. Strellett and the Misses Suzette Compton and Helen Sanger. After being welcomed by Abdullah, with his infatigable "How do you do" song, the tourists make way for the Caliph's daughter, Badroulboudour (Biddy Reiss) and her handmaid, Zubaydah (Christa Womack). Thereupon, Aladdin falls in love with the Princess and together they sing "Beautiful Girl."

In this scene also, we are introduced to Abu Al Bogus (Jack Grenham) a nasty piece of work but full of wise-cracks who, in the second scene at Amina's house, declares he is Aladdin's uncle from Sookunpoo. He doth a tale unfold as to the whereabouts of hidden treasure. Following this, beneath a palace window, Aladdin serenades the Princess with the tuneful plan "Let's Fall in Love."

"Open Sesame"

We are now transported outside the famous cave. After the "Open Sesame" follows an exciting scene wherein Aladdin fills his pockets with treasure and departs with the lamp.

In this fearsome cave, there dwells a dragon which from nose to tail is composed of Leslie Womack, Helen Sanger, Evelyn Buyers, Patsy Marshall and Jane Strellett. Abdullah, who was where he never ought to have been, and Abu Al Bogus meet this awesome monster and, amid breathless excitement, both on the stage and in the hall, are chased for their lives.

The discovery of the magic properties of the lamp takes place in the scene following at Amina's house. On command, four young slaves, Helen, Evelyn, Patsy and Jane, appear laden with treasure which subsequently becomes the dowry offered by Aladdin to the Caliph (D. M. Richards). Amid Oriental splendour, this deal is effected with the assistance of the Grand Wazir (D. L. Strellett). At the wedding feast, there is much dancing. Helen Ho (Circusian Dancer), Suzette Compton (Spinning-Top Dancer) and Diana de Precourt (Oriental Dancer) give of their best after which Zubaydah, Amina and the Caliph trill "Nightfall in Baghdad." The Caliph then, in splendid voice, takes us "From Cairo and Baghdad" and Zubaydah with her young slaves delight with their "Song of the Fruit Girls." The marriage ceremony is solemnized during the singing of "Lantern of Love" by the Caliph. Follows the transformation scene wherein the Pedler, the disguised Abu Al Bogus, on recovering the magic lamp, proceeds to thoroughly wreck the happy home and carry off the Princess.

The Lido Scene

They are discovered later at the Pynka Pong Lido, a feature of which is the marvellous glass swimming tank erected by the Contractors. In this colourful scene there are sea arches swimming around in the charge of the Lido Girl (Diana de Precourt). The hit of the finale is the song "Old Wanchai" sung by Abdullah and Amina. Follows the duet

NAZI PRISONS-

GOERING REFUTES CRUELTY CHARGE

Berlin, Dec. 13. "The retention of concentration camps is an essential part of the process of subduing Communism in Germany," averred General Goering in an address on this subject to a gathering of diplomats, foreign journalists, representatives of the Reichswehr and Nazi organisations last night.

He repeated there could be no question of releasing from prison such Communist leaders as Thaelmann, Torgler and Dr. Neubauer. "Concentration camps," said General Goering, were intended to frighten and deter. Therefore, they could not be run like sanatoriums. He repudiated the charges that the camps were places of torture, though he admitted that individuals might be beaten as a result of the "rage of the people."

General Goering once again emphasised the Nazis' belief in the perfidy of everything connected with Marxism. The existence of an acute Communist menace had to be eradicated at all costs, he said.

General Goering stated that as a result of the August amnesty, 1,900 prisoners had been released from preventive custody in Prussia alone.

Among the prominent people who are not Communists, but have been in custody for over a year without being charged are Doctor Mierendorf, former Socialist member of the Reichstag, Herr Lude-mann, former Socialist Mayor of Breslau, and the Pacificist Herren, Von Noelsertsky Keuster. -Reuter.

"Pynka Pong" and the closing song and chorus "Back to London." Taken all in all, "Aladdin" is a good show and every credit must be given to its producers and property manager (E. I. Wynne-Jones). The children's costumes were designed by Mrs. R. Sanger. Miss B. M. Bichen delighted every one at the piano. The dances throughout the pantomime were arranged by Diana de Precourt.

The pantomime will be repeated this evening at 5.30 o'clock and to-morrow for the last time at the same hour.

FILMLAND NEWS

Colour Secrets of the Screen Studios

COSTLY COSTUMES

Some of the secrets of the film studio were revealed in an interview by Herbert Norris, the costume expert.

One of the first things the newcomer to the studios learns is that white is never white. It may be yellow. Visit any studio (says a Daily Telegraph correspondent) and you will observe the handsome men and pretty women of the screen walking around in complexions of brightest saffron. Similarly, the hero of the piece, wearing the evening dress described in certain school of fiction as immaculate, actually sports waistcoat, shirt, collar, and tie of the same gaudy hue.

Or the cameraman may favour buff, bright blue, or pale grey. In any event, the screen will show pure white. The one thing you must not wear is white, which is much too dazzling for good photography.

In the same way, Mr. Norris avoids black and uses nigger brown.

The cost of dressing an elaborate film runs into many thousands. Of this outlay, however, a good proportion will be recovered from sales to theatrical costumers.

"But why," people sometimes ask, "must such costumes be so expensive? Must the gorgeous satins and velvets, the gold lace, the gold and silver enamel in decorations, all be real?"

The reply is that they must. Your eye might be deceived at the other end of a room, the fake might pass muster in a long shot. But in a closeup, be sure your screen will find you out.

GRETA GARBO'S NEW FILM

Greta Garbo's latest picture, "The Painted Veil," is one hundred per cent. American-made, but there is hardly an American in it!

The picture was adapted from the novel of an Englishman, Somerset Maugham, but the story takes place in China.

Garbo, who plays the role of an Austrian girl, is Swedish.

Herbert Marshall, an Englishman, plays the role of an Englishman as the husband.

George Brent, an Irishman, plays an English role.

Jean Hersholt, a Dane, appears as Garbo's father, an Austrian.

Cecilia Parker, of Canadian birth, is Garbo's sister, also Austrian.

Forrester Harvey, an Irishman, plays a Cockney Englishman.

Billy Bevan, pompous Austrian bridegroom in the picture, is an Australian.

Warner Oland, seen as General Yu, is a Swede.

Soo Young, and Keys Luko, Chinese characters, are actually natives of China.

Richard Boleslavsky, director, is a native of Poland.

The search for an American member of the cast is not entirely futile! Beulah Bondi, who appears as Garbo's mother, was born in Indiana.

THE ROYAL JUBILEE

In celebration of the Royal Jubilee, British Movietone News are preparing a short feature entitled "The King, God Bless Him." This will present a film record of the reign of King George V. from the Coronation in 1911 up to 1935.

Opening with a prologue in verse, composed and spoken by John Drinkwater, the film will show some early photographs of the King's childhood. Preserved film records will bring back the pageantry of the Coronation as well as Important events of the post-war days will be included, and His Majesty's voice is recorded on several occasions. The launching of the Queen Mary and the forthcoming wedding of the Duke of Kent will be shown.

HELEN CHANDLER RETURNS

Helen Chandler, the American film star who has been playing in the B.I.P. films, "It's a Bet" and "Radio Parade of 1935," has finished work here and has returned to New York, where she will star in a new stage production.

She received a cable from her New York agents about a fortnight ago offering her a part in a new and important play. She was then playing in "Radio Parade of 1935," and still had one shot of "It's a Bet" to finish. It was decided to shoot her sequences first and finish her part of the film in time for her to sail.

HONOURS RESTORED

SEVENTEEN YEARS
OF AGONY

MAN ACCUSED OF COWARDICE

With tears streaming down his cheeks a white-haired but erect man of 75 watched the Armistice Day ceremonies in Paris last month for the first time.

He is Colonel Couthaud, an officer of the Legion of Honour, several times mentioned in dispatches, twice wounded, awarded the Croix de Guerre on the field of battle, but disgraced 17 years ago for desertion in face of the enemy.

Automatically deprived of his pension, this old soldier had striven ever since to vindicate his honour so that, in his own words, "he might look his war-time comrades in the face again." On Saturday, on Armistice Day eve, the Appeal Court restored to him his rank and honours.

On June 29, 1917, on Hill 304, in front of Verdun, the 356th Regiment, led for three years by Colonel Couthaud, suffered severe gas and liquid flame attacks which penetrated to the second line. The colonel, finding his telephone communications cut, handed over to his second in command and went to report on the situation to G.H.Q. He was arrested for leaving his post, and a month later was sentenced by Court-martial to five years' imprisonment with benefit of the First Offenders Act, and cashiered.

APPEAL COURT DUEL

When Colonel Couthaud's case came up before the Appeal Court there was a dramatic duel between the president of the Court and General de Boeq, now aged and infirm, who caused Colonel Couthaud to be court-martialled 17 years ago. The general repeated serious personal allegations against the colonel's character and courage.

General de Boeq said that Couthaud always argued. "My information about him," the general added, "prevents me from pronouncing him incapable of cowardice."

The President—If that is so why was he not sentenced to death then?

General de Boeq—We took his 37 years' service and his family into account.

The President—But, good heavens, general! Don't you think other, unfortunate soldiers who were shot did not also have good records and families? In any case you are the only witness who denies what every other witness affirms of the accused—his courage.

Colonel Vesque, another witness, said that in his opinion circumstances fully justified Colonel Couthaud going to G.H.Q. in person. Moreover, he took proper precautions before leaving. He was only away two hours, and the fact remained that his position was never taken.

Colonel Couthaud, when rehabilitated by the Court, exclaimed, "My years of agony of soul are over. I can go to the Armistice Day celebrations to-morrow with high head."

BUSTER KEATON FILM ENDS

Shooting on "The Intruder," the Buster Keaton comedy, which British and Continental have been making at Worton Hall, has now finished, and the star has gone back to America.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Lecture By the Rev.
I. C. Tomlinson

The Reverend Irving C. Tomlinson, C.S.B. of Boston, Massachusetts, a member of the The Christian Science Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, delivered a lecture on Christian Science entitled "Christian Science, A Practical Religion," under the auspices of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Hongkong, in the Roof Garden, Hongkong Hotel, yesterday evening at 8.45 o'clock.

The lecturer was introduced by Mr. A. W. Tickle who said: "Friends,—In her book 'Science & Health with Key to the Scriptures' Mrs. Eddy has written: 'Beyond the frail premises of human beliefs, above the loosening grasp of the material, the demonstration of Christian Mind-healing stands a revelation of practical Science.' and again 'A higher and more practical Christianity demonstrating Justice and meeting the needs of mortals in sickness and in health, stands at the door of this age, knocking for admission.' First Church of Christ, Scientist, Hongkong, welcome you here today to learn something of this practical religion from the Reverend Irving C. Tomlinson, C.S.B. of Boston, a member of the authorized Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts. I have very much pleasure in introducing the Reverend Irving C. Tomlinson, who will now address you."

The lecturer spoke substantially as follows:—

AN ASSURANCE

According to Mr. Irving C. Tomlinson,

MORE SHEEP
FOR AUSTRALIA

Australia in the comparatively near future is expected to carry 60,000,000 more sheep without being overstocked.

Recent experiments in districts prepared with new grasses resulted not only in decreasing sheep parasites but in increasing the weight of wool per sheep as well.

Australia now carries approximately 100,000,000 sheep, each producing eight to nine pounds of wool a year.

ONE MIND

The lecturer reasoned that since God is Mind, and God is Infinite, and one, it follows logically that God is all the Mind there is, and there can be but one Mind. This Mind, he declared to be all-seeing divine Love. The activity of this Mind, he pointed out, is always in the realm of perfection, and transformation, not annihilation, is the result of this activity.

More than ever men are asking Philo's question "What is Truth?" Mr. Tomlinson declared, and in explaining that the answer of Christian Science is that Truth is God, he quoted from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, this unparalleled definition: "God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite, Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth, Love." Truth then, he pointed out, is the incorporeal God, without flesh or any thought of flesh; it is divine consciousness. He also quoted the statement from Mrs. Eddy's book "The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany": "If we say that the sun stands for God, then all His rays collectively stand for Christ, and each separate ray for men and women," and explained that the whole light, then, is Christ, and the rays are the children of God.

MRS. EDDY

Mr. Tomlinson spoke of his in-linson of Boston, the outcry of a suffering world to-day for salvation was answered twenty centuries ago by Christ Jesus when he said "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." He also stated that Christian Science comes to-day in his name with an assurance that the promises will be fulfilled.

Mr. Tomlinson explained that Christian Science teaches that whatever the need, there is always divine Love enough present to save one from any affliction, always Truth enough to destroy any error, always divine intelligence enough to point the way out.

In stating that the urgent problem of to-day is the solution of the uncertain and unsettled state of affairs in the economic or business realm, the lecturer explained that since there is just as much land and air as there ever was, just as much food, (in fact an abundance of food), just as many willing hands to go to work—an abundance of material supply, the trouble is obviously not in the matter condition or the material situation, but in the mental realm. All lack is a mental condition, he said, and mankind is experiencing the results of corruption, greed, materiality, prior to its purification.

He held that to-day Christian Science, as discovered by Mary Baker Eddy, offers a solution for the problems not only of the individual, the home and the church, but for the counting-room, the factory, the farm, even the governments of the world. He explained that Christian Science is teaching that the words of Paul "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" state a present day fact.

DEATH OF FAMOUS CLOWN"WHIMSICAL WALKER"VETERAN OF
THE RING

The death was announced recently of Thomas Dawson Walker, better known as "Whimsical Walker," aged 84. Walker, who was one of the most popular clowns of the circus arena, had been living at Gorsewood.

He had been seventy-three years in the circus where admission cost a penny, and he was a link, one of the few surviving, with the hey-day of pantomime harlequinade. For thirty years he played clown in the annual Drury Lane pantomime. During the last seven years he had appeared in the circus at Olympia.

Early last year he underwent a delicate throat operation that would have incapacitated many men half his age, but thanks to his great courage and never failing cheerfulness he achieved a triumphant recovery.

He delighted the heart of Princess Elizabeth when she went to the circus for the first time in January this year by allowing her to hold a "red hot" poker.

It is no exaggeration to say that millions of children, many now with families of their own, knew and loved the old man's engaging art. Few clowns had a more infectious humour.

Tradition has it that every successful comedian's ambition is to play "Hamlet." If Walker ever had that urge, it was satisfied, for nearly forty years ago he did take the part at Olympia, though it was in a condensed and humorous version. It was his only appearance in Shakespeare, but it was a great success, and Walker was fond of narrating how he played the part eight times a day for twelve weeks.

AN ANIMAL TRAINER

Whimsical Walker was born at Hull in a public house, which was kept by his parents. He went to school until he was eight, and became a clown at the age of ten. His first great success was in Hengler's Circus with a performing donkey which he taught to sing. On one occasion the donkey left the circus procession in Hull, walked into a hotel, and lay down on a bed, to the consternation of

ATTACK

London, Dec. 5.

Walker also trained some geese, but one of them ate a hole in the safety net used by a trapeze act at the same circus. The men in charge invited Walker to supper the next night. Goose was served, and next morning Walker found only three instead of four of his performing geese. In addition he was ill for a fortnight with indigestion.

A performing pig was his next attempt. This prospered until the animal swallowed a sovereign—

"BORN TO BE HUNG"

Walker was very proud of having had his portrait painted by

In future wars infantry will be able to advance under machine-gun fire in "mechanical coffins." This is the name given to an invention which the War Department here is considering. Actually it is an armoured box, propelled by a tiny motor. It will hold a light machine-gunner lying flat, and will carry him much

H.R.H. the Duke of Kent, is here seen inspecting nurses of the St. John Ambulance Brigade in Hyde Park.

Mrs. Laura Knight and hung in the Academy. "My father always told me I was born to be hung," he told a reporter in an interview some years ago. "His words have come true—I have been hung—in the Academy."

Walker had toured all over the world. Once he travelled to Sydney and back, three months at sea, in order to be the clown for five nights and two matinees. His last public appearance was in September at the first supper rally of the Circus Fans Association in Yarmouth Hippodrome after the last performance of the summer season.

faster than if he tried to crawl, and with far less exposure than in the normal advance where he had to run or walk forward upright.

Using an "armoured crawler" of this kind he may have a far better change of getting within close range of the defending machine-gunner ensconced behind cover.

It is only about 7-feet long, less than a yard wide, and stands only knee-high. It is propelled by a motor of about four h.p. Traveling along the road the occupant sits comfortably in his "perambulator," but on reaching the battlefield changes to a prone position with his light machine-gun pointing ahead.

A slightly wider type is under consideration to accommodate two men.—United Press.

The above photograph was taken shortly after Mayor Wu Teh shan of Greater Shanghai had presented the Military Medal of the First Class to Comdt. L. Fabre of the French Police on behalf of the National Government.

STOLE CASE OF
DYNAMITETWO MEN SENT TO
PRISONYu Kee, a stone driller, and Lam
Shing, earth cooler, were charged before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, with having broken and entered dynamite store No. 111 at Lan Nei
Wan and stolen a case of dynamite, the property of Tai Chun, foreman of the Tai Yau Kee firm of contractors, on December 11. Defendants pleaded guilty.
Inspector Logan said the incident took place where the new catchwater is being made near Lan Nei
Wan. A watchman was on duty along with another on the morning of December 8 when they heard a noise, and one of them went out to investigate. He and, perhaps, finish amongst the placed ponies.

The first race will be the December Handicap and I think the issue will be between Connock's Beauty and Hotman. I prefer the chances of the latter. King's Warden, I think, will be good enough to collect the third prize.

BARRIER REEF HANDICAP
Barrier Reef Handicap. Can't you repeat his gallop of the last time? If so, I think she will win this race. High Finance—if started here in preference to the Queensland Champions—has an outstanding chance. I would make him the winner but for his bad behaviour at the starting gate. He invariably gets left and for this reason his chances are discounted. Empire Day appeals as an each way proposition. Dinty may find the weight too much and the distance too far to be dangerous.

TARY HANDICAP
Tary Handicap. A good race and a good dividend should be paid out in this race. There are a number of ponies with winning chances. I think, however, Don and Ribble show up best. I am inclined to support Ribble but only half-heartedly as I know how very dangerous Don will prove himself to be. I pick Valorous or the third position, but I can see considerable danger coming from Racing Boy, Wayward Star and Wonderful Stag.

DILATORY PLATE
Dilatory Plate. On his Macao running, Sandy Bay should win his race. For placings I look to Great Hall and Solar Star to fill the positions.
FINALE PLATE
Finale Plate. If Little Beauty elects to start here, we need not look further for the winner. In his absence, I like the chances of Soldier of Fortune with Ironsides for the second and Hell for Leather for the third place.

If you are young, Pilsener, taken when necessary, will help you keep in perfect physical condition, the necessary daily functional regularity. If middle-aged, Pilsener will keep your liver active, your complexion fresh, your brain clear.
To remedy that host of the abominable chronic constipation, Pilsener is the perfect remedy. It is not a habit-forming laxative, but a powerful purgative. They also aid digestion, banish bilious attacks and sick headaches, quickly relieve flatulency.
In short, constipation is the Pilsener at times. Try them yourself. Your chemist can supply them.

COINTREAU Liqueur
LA MARQUE MONDIALE

"NO THANK YOU BOY" How many times at the end of a perfectly cheery dinner is this remark made in Hongkong, when the two or three uninteresting liqueurs are handed round? Strangely enough, so many hosts neglect this final touch to an otherwise excellent repast.

And yet there are several delightfully subtle liqueurs which will not only be greatly appreciated, but will capture the imagination of your guests and create an atmosphere of soothing contentment.

Of course, the wonderfully subtle spirits of COINTREAU are universally known.

The secret charms of SEVE SAINTONGE; the delicacy of MAJESTIC, and of those exquisite "LIQUEURS DE FRAISES" and "LIQUEURS DE FRAMBOISES" embodying the soul of French strawberries and raspberries, are the joy of epicures.

Now available at The French Store, The Wing On Company, The Kwan Tye Loong Store, The Empress Store (Nathan Road), The Hung Cheong Store (Nathan Road) and the Tai Woo Store (Hankow Road, Kowloon).

ARMS TRAFFIC
CONTROL

The revelations made during the Senate Committee's investigations into the traffic in arms have induced President Roosevelt to take the first step in a movement designed to bring an end to private manufacture of the instruments of warfare. He has set up a special committee to deal with the issue, and it seems more than likely that he will succeed in the task to which he has put his hands. If he does, the United States will be setting a much-needed example to the rest of the world. The British Government's attitude on this question is against nationalisation of the arms industries; it prefers a system of regulation and control, international in character. It is doubtful, however, despite the recent House of Commons rejection of a Labour motion, against private manufacture, whether the British public as a whole is at one with the Government on this matter. Possibly when the result of the League of Nations' peace ballot is made known, it will be seen that the people prefer an out-and-out abolition of private manufacture. One of the questions in that ballot deals specifically with the point; it reads: "Should the manufacture and sale of arms for private profit be prohibited by international agreement?" Efforts have been made by Government spokesmen to stress the difficulties in the way of an international understanding on this issue, but it will be surprising if the query is not answered by an overwhelming majority in the affirmative. The Labour Party has argued that whilst the private trade in arms is not the sole or even the main cause of war, the existence of private profit-making interests in armaments is a factor making for international insecurity. It would even go further than nationalisation by coupling with disarmament all round the placing of all arms and munitions factories under a world authority. Whilst such a method of dealing with the problem is scarcely to be expected in the near future, there can be no questioning the point that so long as private interests are permitted to manufacture armaments, so long will there be strong inducements for the working up of war scares. Recent revelations have disclosed the tremendous profits which armament firms have been able to glean in a trade which depends for its existence on war and rumours of war. In this connection it is not without interest to note some figures recently quoted by Dr. Addison, based on his experience at the Ministry of Munitions during the war. Saying that Britain set up its own national factories because private armament manufacturers were unable to meet the demands, he stated that although these factories were hurriedly improvised, within a few months of their establishment, they were producing 18-pounders at ten to twelve shillings apiece, whereas the average contract price, even with the most experienced armament firms, was twenty shillings. But apart from considerations of cost, the case for taking arms manufacture out of the hands of private firms is overwhelming. Admittedly, Government control of the trade would not be of great value unless at the same time there was an international convention embodying a system of licensing. But the first step is to make it impossible for private interests to amass profits from death-dealing weapons of warfare. The United States is approaching the question from the right angle. Let us hope that the example will be widely followed.

NOTES OF THE DAY

PEACE AND THE SAAR

It is evident that French policy, based on the preservation of existing rights in Europe, has hardened in recent months. Every Frenchman desires peace. What worries him is that peace is such an uneasy proposition. It is composed of fears and apprehension, of suspicion, of preparation for a possible conflict, writes Sisley Huddleston, from Paris. Throughout the greater part of the world there is the same false kind of peace. Nearly every country in thinking of peace is disturbed by the prospect of war. And it may even be that in the end war will appear to many people as preferable to the anxieties of peace. A good deal has been done to dissipate the glamour of war. The war experience itself taught millions of men who had gone out joyously enough in the conviction that they were defending honour, home, civilisation, that war is a senseless and a vile business. The disclosures which have been made—and are still being made—of mercenary motives, of plotting in mass murder, have added to the deep disgust. The obvious foolishness of most of the diplomacy of the world has not escaped the attention of the average intelligent man.

NO HEADWAY

But the conception of peace in its positive sense, as desirable in itself, has scarcely made headway. It is still looked upon as the mere absence of war. Peoples can perhaps be persuaded to yield a minimum to prevent war; they have not yet been asked to sacrifice the maximum in the establishment of peace. The maximum, in this connection, is simply the notion of national superiority. They believe themselves—each people—to be better than other nations. Let us look at the Saar. It is, of course, German. It was temporarily taken from Germany by way of providing compensation for France's loss in coal. That loss has been amply compensated; the Saar should now be surrendered to Germany. One would suppose that the French would be eager to hand back the Saar, in order that no territorial dispute with Germany can arise on a matter in which French claims are virtually nonexistent. Yet when the plebiscite, which normally would show an overwhelming majority of the inhabitants in favour of reintegration in the Reich, is about to be taken, French policy apparently is to induce Saarlanders, if it can be done without open intervention, to vote for the status quo, that is to say, administration by a Commission of the League of Nations. There is, of course, no hope of a vote for France, but there may be just a chance of a vote against Germany. Why? Because the Saar enjoys various advantages under the League administration with some elements of a French economic and monetary regime, and escapes a number of liabilities and hardships which the German people are at present enduring. Suppose the Saarlanders, thinking of their coal mines, remembering the benefits of the present economic arrangements, voted for the status quo. That would, in a way, be a calamity for Europe. For it is certain that Germany would not cease to strive for the recovery of the lost province. It is virtually certain that the Saarlanders would soon repent. The possibility of a Franco-German clash would not be far-fetched. In short, a vote for the status quo in the Saar might bring war to Europe.

At all events, it is interesting to analyse our friends in the role of torchbearers down the highway of evolution. What sort of people are they? How do they react to life's problems? What kind of a legacy are they preparing for posterity? Among my own friends there are two who present a strong contrast to each other and whom I regard as the typical extremes of the influential classes. One of them—I shall call him Mr. A—is "fat and forty". The most remarkable thing about him is an inordinate lust for money. In other respects he is a thoroughly good fellow. He spins a good yarn over a bottle; he is a topnotcher on the golf links; he never misses a boxing match; and he enjoys a flirtation now and then or an after-the-show carousal at "Ye Toad in the Hole" or whatnot. But ask him what he thinks of the Balkan Dispute, and he will not stare blankly, for he is not as naive as all that, but he will contrive to reply so as to put the whole matter in a trivial light. He once confided to me, broadmindedly enough, that he was sadly deficient in the arts and sciences but that he had woken to the fact too late in life, when he no longer had the courage or application to surmount the appalling mountain of academic facts; so he had soon relapsed into his usual happy-go-lucky mode of existence, his only claim to distinction being the small fortune he was amassing.

Now my other friend—Mr. B if you like—is a very different character. He takes life very seriously.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING
FOR POSTERITY?

By E. SCHROTER

What is the matter with the world to-day? This is a question that has been asked so often in late years, in one way or another, that it passes for little short of facetiousness when raised by the average man in the street. Moreover, with the science of sociology very much in its infancy and world politics showing no signs of settling down to rational principles, one might well be fearfully sceptical of the future and timid in branching such a subject.

However, there is no reason why the least erudite among us should be discouraged from giving the matter a thought or two. On the contrary, it is a duty; for each and every one of us contributes towards the course of evolution, whether for good or otherwise. Personally, I feel like the bishop who, on visiting St. Peter's for the first time, felt his spirit swell until it filled the whole edifice; rather than like that other bishop who imagined himself dwindling away to nothingness—so greatly overawed was he.

Most of us seem to be agreed on the fact that the world is "going to the dogs". Our minds are filled with uneasiness—with all sorts of vague but dire forebodings. And yet how many of us do anything about it? There is the usual plentiful crop of preachers and the usual dearth of altruistic souls who really set down to it. We are all so existentially preoccupied with our own individual affairs that we leave to others the good work of worrying about what sort of a world we bequeath to our children's children, ignoring the sociological truism that the individual is best off when the community as a whole prospers. This no doubt is literary hash to thinking people, but it probably contains a germ of novelty to many.

At all events, it is interesting to analyse our friends in the role of torchbearers down the highway of evolution. What sort of people are they? How do they react to life's problems? What kind of a legacy are they preparing for posterity? Among my own friends there are two who present a strong contrast to each other and whom I regard as the typical extremes of the influential classes.

One of them—I shall call him Mr. A—is "fat and forty". The most remarkable thing about him is an inordinate lust for money. In other respects he is a thoroughly good fellow. He spins a good yarn over a bottle; he is a topnotcher on the golf links; he never misses a boxing match; and he enjoys a flirtation now and then or an after-the-show carousal at "Ye Toad in the Hole" or whatnot. But ask him what he thinks of the Balkan Dispute, and he will not stare blankly, for he is not as naive as all that, but he will contrive to reply so as to put the whole matter in a trivial light. He once confided to me, broadmindedly enough, that he was sadly deficient in the arts and sciences but that he had woken to the fact too late in life, when he no longer had the courage or application to surmount the appalling mountain of academic facts; so he had soon relapsed into his usual happy-go-lucky mode of existence, his only claim to distinction being the small fortune he was amassing.

Now my other friend—Mr. B if you like—is a very different character. He takes life very seriously.

ly—too seriously. He is learned and can talk brilliantly on almost any topic under the sun. His zealousness in pursuit of truth has cost him many a sleepless night and in consequence he is thin and cadaverous. He too is getting on in the world, for people look up to him as they might, in primeval times, have looked up to a medicine man or high-priest. Of course it takes all kinds to make a world. But, you will remember, I am in search of the type of man who is best suited to shoulder the responsibilities of life and to act as a pointer to Mother Nature when she brings new souls into the world. Now I do not think that either Mr. A or Mr. B would pass muster as such. If most of us were like Mr. A, we would soon be back in the dark ages. On the other hand, if Mr. B were the predominant pattern, the world would probably tend towards a Wellesian Utopia, true, but there is little doubt that it would be quite devoid of romance—a deadly dull world.

No, I say, give me a man who sleeps at nights—by all means. But let him have a healthy thirst for knowledge and the will to acquire it despite the dryness of the rudimentary "first steps". For, having got so far along the path of enlightenment, man must continue, stagnation or retrogression would soon spell disaster to the bulk of mankind. But let him, above all things, cultivate a spirit of adventure—that miraculous attitude of the mind that adds zest to every act in life, whether great or little, and which preserves a sane outlook whether he be on the pinnacle of success and vigorous health or in the doldrums of adversity and illness.

I am tempted to put this forward as a panacea for most of the social ills of the world. One meets this spirit, once in a while, but it is all too rare. It is like a draft of ozone from an Alpine mountainside. It temporarily infuses even the melancholic with its tonic effects. And it is usually found with all that is best in mind and body; for, when it is the guiding spirit in a person's life, nature can work untrammelled in eliminating the poisons of mind and body, as she does under the cover of sound, healthful sleep. The cynic, or pseudo-cynic, may be inclined to smile tolerantly, but those who have experienced the throes of mental depression know only too well the value of the kind of auto-suggestion I am hinting at.

This spirit, which I call the spirit of adventure, which banishes petty worry, sex oppression and all the other crabby traits of the average city dweller, is not necessarily a natural characteristic of a few fortunate individuals. Psychologists tell us it can be acquired by anyone who is not a confirmed pessimist. Have we not, among geniuses, the example of Helene, whose genius flourished during the eight years of living death that terminated his life? Let a man but make up his mind, first thing in the morning, to be cheerful every minute of the day and to treat consciously everything that befalls as part of the great adventure of life itself, and he is in a fair way to discovering the elixir of spiritual youthfulness. He will soon find himself pulling with nature instead of against her, as so many do. And if this is not a "good thing" for posterity, what is?

The Very Idea!
THE IMPATIENT
PATIENT

By Edward "Sore-bones" Kelly
CLAD in bandages and his night-shirt, Mr. Edward Kelly, the well-known motorist, writes this week's "Very Idea" from the depths of his bed in the Kowloon Hospital. Mr. Kelly's story is simply told. Last week a shady tree sheltered palpitating peters along the Fanning Road. Last week, also, Mr. Kelly was the proud possessor of a motor-car. This week there is neither tree nor car. Now read on.

WE feel surgery all over. To think that, only a week ago we were going to write wisecracks about Hongkong doctors!

Dr. Smalley may be going to operate on us but we don't want to be his meat.

Still they're an hospital crowd here.

Dozens of sisters and nurses crowding around us all day making us feel at home with their bottles; doctors sticking old-fashioned phonographs to our chests while we say "ninety-nine"; and wardmen warding off all kinds of disease such as pneumonia, neuritis, pneumaticism and neuralgia.

Also tonsillitis, bronchitis, peritonitis, alcoholitis and other lights too numerous to mention. Since we were admitted here we have become very keen on Nura-on hospitals.

We heartily recommend them to anyone who wants a change.

After all, the young man of Hongkong cannot afford to take risks where his health is concerned.

Play decks and drakes with your health and you'll find yourself in the hands of the quacks.

Actually there's no difficulty about getting into hospital. The only hard work is the getting out part.

We know several simple ways of getting in.

Some people swear by mosquito bites, but a simpler way is to sack a police officer on the jaw.

Personally we preferred the motor car method.

We were just waking up when they brought us in to Doc. Smalley.

"Him!" he said, "very GRAVE!" We were sore. Didn't know whether he referred to our condition or destination.

We spat out three or four teeth and groaned.

"We must remove his foibles," said someone.

One of the dispensers hit us over the head and we gradually lost consciousness.

When we awoke we were in bed. We don't know yet whether they have taken our foibles, but they have pinched our pants.

We are on the road to recovery now, thank you, and are allowed to take slight nourishment.

For fifteen to-day they gave us some hot water that tasted strangely of chicken.

To-morrow, the doctor tells us, we may go on our usual diet. We are too ill to send out for some, but securely packed bottles may be sent to us through the post office.

In any case, rum up and see us sometime!

DUMB-BELLES LETTRES

by Juliet Lowell

Second World War!

Honolulu Golf Club.

Gentlemen:

I note that I am indebted to you for the sum of $4.40 for monthly dues, special assessment and some sort of an additional racket that you call a war tax. I suppose I will have to pay this in spite of the fact that I have never yet set foot on the so-called golf links, nor been inside the so-called club house.

Now I do not object to this at all. It makes me feel a deeper personal interest in the golf club, and by the time I have had to dig up a few more assessments I may become sufficiently interested to visit the place. If I should decide to play a round or two as a result of my newly stimulated interest and curiosity, the committee would regret ever having awakened such interest—and another assessment would be required at once for repairing the grounds.

But this war tax racket gets my goat. It may be alright to fool the majority of the people that way but I have discovered by judicious inquiry that the WAR HAS BEEN OVER for a number of years. Being interested chiefly in golf, you gentlemen may not have heard the news, but I assure you it is authentic. You see I am in the newspaper game and have to keep well informed as to world events. The last war is over and the next one has not yet started, so where in hell is the sense of levying a war tax? They are not using our golf links for a battle ground, are they? I think we are being gypped and suggest that you take the matter up with Mr. Roosevelt who ought to know whether we are in war or not.

Sincerely and practically yours,

F. K. Makino.

"And you'll find that a lot safer, mamma, than that old coffee pot."

Mass Flight Over Ocean

CALIFORNIA TO PHILIPPINES

NO DEFINITE DECISION

(Special to "Telegraph")

Washington, Dec. 13. The Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Claude Swanson, said to-day that some long distance Navy flights would undoubtedly be held in connection with the 1935 Pacific manoeuvres between Alaska and Hawaii.

The destination of any planes hopping off from either of these extremities of the naval defence system could not be announced, since their itineraries were not even mapped as yet, Mr. Swanson said.

He dodged the question as to whether naval planes would attempt a flight to the Philippines.—United Press.

MASS OCEAN FLIGHT

San Francisco, Dec. 13. Authoritative sources aboard the Pacific flagship New Mexico stated to-day that the Navy was strongly considering a mass flight of seaplanes from San Francisco to the Philippines, via Hawaii, in connection with the Pacific manoeuvres in 1935.

It is not yet decided, however, whether the planes will travel by way of Hawaii or the Aleutians.—United Press.

half of the new cases dealt with during the year. In 588 new cases the Society was able to secure medical attention for children, and in this branch of activity the co-operation of the Government Infant Welfare Centres in Wanchai and Kowloon was invaluable.

Poverty appeared as the factor in 818 cases dealt with by the Society during the year, and in 748 of these milk or other food was provided. The Society has during the year secured 46 hawkers' licences for parents and in all branches of its work it alleviates the sufferings of mother and child.

SLUM PROBLEM

The Society is slowly uprooting in homes here and there the old fatalistic complacency with things as they are, and implanting in its place a new attitude towards dirt and disease, which, when slum clearance begins, will be of immense value to those who are endeavouring the bring about the improvements.

It is a matter for satisfaction that the number of cases in which wanton ill-treatment features is very small. His Excellency the Governor, in addressing the Society at the Annual Meeting last year called attention to this fact, and this year's experience endorses his remarks. In only one case during the year was it found that the circumstances warranted prosecution, although efforts to ensure the future welfare of the children concerned, either by arranging for their removal to a safe environment or for supervision, were necessary on several occasions. In this branch of the Society's work your Committee cannot speak too highly of the unfailing sympathy and co-operation of the officers of the Secretariat for the Chinese Affairs. Only those who are in close contact with the work of the senior officers, of Sub-Inspector Fraser and of the women inspectors of the Secretariat can sufficiently appreciate the value of their efforts on behalf of the more unfortunate children of the Colony.

APPEAL FOR FUNDS

The Committee has unfortunately to report a deficiency of $2,417.73 on the year's working. While expenditure for the year, at $23,258.55, showed a decrease of $1,394.68 on the corresponding figure for the previous year, income declined by $3,517.12 to $20,843.82.

Within the last five years the Society has dealt with 3,119 cases affecting the welfare of 6,938 children. Its deficit on the past three years' working amounts to $6,926.11. Your Committee are confident that their appeal for extended financial support during the coming year will meet with a generous response.

BAIL IN KIDNAPPING CASE

Young Portuguese Released

On the application of Mr. M. K. Lo, who appeared on behalf of Luiz Antonio da Rocha, cash bail of $3,000 was granted by Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning.

Originally the police had asked for bail to be fixed at $10,000. Rocha is one of the two Portuguese who are held in connection with the kidnapping of a six-year-old Portuguese boy, Luiz Jose Ribeiro, from No. 7 Hanoi Road, Kowloon, on Monday night.

The two defendants were charged yesterday afternoon, and were remanded to December 20, at 10 a.m.

AMERICA'S FINANCING

LARGE CONVERSION PLAN ANNOUNCED

New York, Dec. 13. The Treasury Department to-day announced the allotment of $968,000,000 in cash subscriptions for the recent offering of 18 years and 18 months bonds, while of maturing certificates totalling $992,000,000, a total of $976,000,000 will be converted into new notes, $16,000,000 worth of holdings being redeemable in cash.—Reuter.

Penal servitude for life and even the death sentence may be inflicted where the object is to cause riot or to arouse terror. The law says that a German can be prosecuted for a breach of the enactment for the state, even though the offence occurs abroad.—Reuter.

CLAIMS AGAINST GAS CO.

EXPLOSION DISASTER SEQUEL

Further claims against the Hongkong & China Gas Company in respect of the explosion at the Company's works in May were mentioned at the Supreme Court this morning before the Puisse Judge, Mr. Justice Lindsell.

Mr. G. S. Ford, of Messrs. Wilkinson & Grist, appeared for Cheng Shi, Lo Cheuk, Ho Hui, Chan Lan, Suen Kiu and Suen Kam in claims totalling $1,110.

Mr. W. A. Mackinlay, of Messrs. Deacons, represented the Company.

It was stated that previous actions of this nature had been adjourned sine die pending the result of a test case which was to be heard in Original Jurisdiction before the Chief Justice.

His Lordship agreed to an adjournment of the cases.

Dutra Wins In Spite Of Injury

MASTERFUL PLAY FOR GOLF PURSE

HURT AS BRIDGE COLLAPSES

Miami, Dec. 13. There was a dramatic incident just before the finish of the $12,500 Miami-Biltmore Golf Tournament to-day which Olin Dutra won with an aggregate of 292 for 72 holes.

A bridge on which Dutra and a dozen others were walking, crashed into a canal. Some of the people were thrown into deep water, but Dutra landed half in and half out, striking the turf bank with some force. He complained that he had strained his left arm. Nevertheless, he resumed play. On the seventh green he seemed to be in distress and rested again.

In a few minutes he was ready to go to the last hole and finished a superb match with a super-putt, from twenty-five feet, scoring a birdie on the eighteenth hole.—Reuter.

URGES WIDER DEVELOPMENT

CHINA MUST BE SELF SUSTAINING

Hankow, Dec. 13. General Liu Hsiang, commander of the bandit-suppression forces in Szechuen, who is returning to Szechuen after completing his mission at Nanking, arrived here this morning aboard the ss. Wu Yu.

Judging by a statement he made to pressmen on his arrival here, it seems that he consulted with the Central Government leaders regarding the economic problems in Szechuen besides military and political affairs. He said, inter alia, that in the event of world crisis the economic organisation of China would be exposed to extreme danger as heavy industries were mostly developed in the lower section of the Yangtze Valley. He drew the attention of the Government to the importance of developing the resources of Szechuen.—Central News.

ANGLO-INDIAN TRADE

HOPES OF EARLY AGREEMENT

London, Dec. 13.

Answering a House of Commons question regarding the negotiations for an Anglo-Indian trade agreement, the President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Runciman, said the main difficulties had been surmounted, and there was every reason to hope that an agreement would be settled at an early date.

Regarding its scope, Mr. Runciman said it did not deal with the actual rates of duty on particular commodities, but laid down the principles to be followed in fixing Indian protective duties on United Kingdom goods, not only textiles, but also on other goods subject to protective duties. The United Kingdom, of course, gave certain

WELCOME TO PUISNE JUDGE

Court Tributes To Mr. Justice Lindsell

Mr. R. E. Lindsell took his seat in the Summary Jurisdiction Court at Supreme Court for the first time in his capacity as Puisne Judge this morning.

The Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, sat with him and endorsed an address of welcome made by the Hon. Mr. C. G. Alabaster, Attorney General, on behalf of the legal profession who were represented in large numbers.

In the body of the Court was Mrs. Lindsell who had come to witness her husband take over his new office.

The Hon. Mr. Alabaster said: As this is the first occasion on which Mr. Justice Lindsell has taken his seat in this Court since he has received the office of Puisne Judge, I should like to extend to him the congratulations of both branches of the legal profession and, as he has previously sat as Puisne Judge, it is unnecessary for me to express our feelings of confidence that the happy relations which have existed between Bench and Bar and which are so pleasant a feature of our life here, will continue in this Court under his direction.

The Chief Justice said: I have very gladly taken the opportunity of coming to this Court this morning because I can so gladly endorse and so gladly voice my own feelings of satisfaction and my own welcome to my Brother Lindsell on taking his seat in this Court. As you have said, Mr. Lindsell is no stranger to this Court. He has in fact occupied a seat upon this Bench in the Summary Court for, I suppose, a longer total period than I have, and it is within my own knowledge already that what you have said Mr. Attorney General, as to the happy relations between Bench and practitioners in this Court during Mr. Lindsell's temporary occupation, is true. These relations will continue to exist and I can only say that, as Chief Justice, it gives me very great pleasure indeed to know that my Brother Lindsell is now going to be a permanent occupant of this Bench, and that I can count with confidence on his assistance on all matters affecting the administration of justice in this Court.

Mr. Justice Lindsell said: I desire to thank you very much for your kind wishes. I hope to merit the confidence of the legal profession and am encouraged in this optimism by the knowledge that I shall have the skilled co-operation and assistance of that profession in the interpretation and carrying out of the law.

The Court then adjourned, to reopen a few minutes later with Mr. Justice Lindsell presiding over the weekly calling over of the summary list.

SEEKING NEW MARKETS

Shanghai, Dec. 14. Mr. Huang Wen-shih, of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce at Singapore, is arriving here shortly to suggest to the industrialists at home a plan for the expansion of the Chinese goods' market in Singapore, by the establishment of a Chinese emporium and the organisation of a Chinese exhibition. Many Chinese factories at Shanghai have expressed their approval to his suggestions.—Central News.

Mr. A. Brerley, of the Chartered Bank, arrived back from Home by the P. and O. liner Ranchi yesterday, accompanied by his two daughters.

It is announced that the wedding of Lieutenant John David Luce, R.N., of H.M.S. Medway and Miss Mary Adelaide Norah Whitham, will take place shortly. Miss Whitham resides at 10, Shek-O.

While delivering letters at No. 327 Prince Edward Road yesterday, a postman, Yuen Lau, 25, was bitten by a dog owned by Mr. H. C. Best. The postman was treated at the Kowloon Hospital, while the dog was removed to Ma Tau Kok for observation.

Theft of a neat chopper on Wednesday was the charge which faced Chong Yung-kee, aged 24, unemployed, when he appeared before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, and was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour. Wong Wa-kee, the master of the Wah Kee noodle stall, Tai Kok Tsui, appeared as complainant.

Arrested coming out of a pawnshop, after trying to pawn a jacket and a pair of trousers, which he had stolen from No. 70 Parkes Street, first floor, on Wednesday, So Tuen, aged 20, unemployed, was brought before Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, and was sentenced to three weeks' hard labour. Detective-Sergeant Franklin stated that the clothing had been left in the pawnshop way to dry. The stolen articles belonged to Wan Man, aged 38, a widow.

MEAT FROM NEW ZEALAND

REDUCTION OF IMPORTS IN BRITAIN

London, Dec. 13.

The Dominion Secretary, Mr. J. H. Thomas, said in the House of Commons that he had been in correspondence with the Government of New Zealand regarding the limitation of meat exports from New Zealand arriving between January 1 and March 31, 1935.

A programme had been agreed upon which involved a reduction of the total imports of meat from New Zealand during that period, as compared with the imports of the corresponding period last year.—British Wireless.

ABLE AMAZON AND SOLDIER OF BRITAIN FOR THE LOCAL CRICKET NOTES

THE ARMY'S CHALLENGE IN THE SHIELD COMPETITION VASTLY IMPROVED TEAM

(By R. Abbit)

There was a reasonable full programme in the Senior League last Saturday, and with a bit of fortune all three games might have been finished, for Craigengower came very close to beating Recreio, while either side might have won at King's Park, if one or two incidents had a different outcome. As it is, the Army alone seem to have the slightest chance of giving the Club a run for their money in the Shield Competition. There are two features in the advance of Army Cricket.

They have practically no new players except de Pritchard (I hope I shall discover an alternative designation, as the printer isn't going to get that right all through the season), but they have shaken down into a real team of regular players, some of whom have improved vastly this season; and, in the second place, they are up against less severe opposition in many cases. The Club and the Navy are, so far as I can see, the only two teams whose form has not deteriorated for the time being. The issue of the Club and Army game on January 19 will make a tremendous difference, to the probability. We shall have a dress-rehearsal of this on Boxing Day.

LAY'S CENTURY

Ever since Arthur Lay attempted to commit mayhem upon me with a nibbler for my innocent reference to his censure at Fanning, I have been wondering if he would repeat the performance on the cricket field; and I have been fortunate enough personally to see him equal his score at the billiards-table-to-grass which he effects on Sundays. Curiously enough his century was not a typical "Lay" hurricane. He did, indeed drive powerfully, but he was indulging frequently in extremely pretty square cuts, and shots to the covers. After he had reached seventy he became—for him—slow, partly from taking extra care, I suspect, and partly owing to the fact that the Navy had set out a very deep "savage" field. However, he hit anything loose very hard, and reached the coveted century. Meanwhile Teddy Fincher had proceeded sedately to a pretty sixty before he was bowled in trying to hit. After that it is true that the K.C.C. batsmen were in a hurry, but the fact remains that E. P. Fincher and Robert Lee both played at the first balls they respectively received and were bowled neck and crop. As a matter of fact, Benant, who was the sixth bowler tried, bowled uncommonly well as he usually swung in late with his ball on or just outside the off stump, while, if he did not swing, the ball broke appreciably from the off. In fact he might have got several more wickets save that he did a bit too much and beat the leg stick as well as the bat. I shall be most interested to see if he can reproduce this form, (a) on grass, and (b) with any old wind or none! If he can, he is one of the bowlers the Navy wants so badly. F. Zimmerman got nineteen not out and I hope it is the beginning of a recovery of form for him. Still 1/147 and 7/186 is pretty mouldy. I think a few more of these thin parties are indicated. Verb. Sep.

THAT MATTING

I have, for sometime said that the Navy ought to do something about that matting. I admit it is not easy to get the full eight-foot width, nor to keep it steadily at a tension stretch. But it ought to be stopped at the popping crease. As it is you don't give the bowlers a chance of planting the front foot on turf, and you have all this slumgery of taking guard with a bit of chalk. Besides, if what I am told is true, it caused an accident last Saturday as a batsman nicked the ball down very hard on to a back securing pin and it flicked up like lightning to split Holland-Martin's chin. I recollect knocking Ponsbury-Fane out like that in the days (Concise Plaque) when I used to bowl fast, only in that case it was a very wide ball that took an outside peg on a narrow matting strip in the season when C.S.C.C. used this type of wicket. There is no doubt that the most satisfactory type of matting wicket is the eight-foot strip pegged at the popping crease.

AN EXCITING FINISH

Who the Submarine drafting Officer is I don't know, but we owe him a debt of gratitude for sending Bramwell out here. He looks like a batsman from the world go, which is more than most people, except Alec Pearce, do these days. He has a beautifully straight bat, the position of his right elbow is a perfect example for any young batsman (only make it "left" elbow for a right-hander), while he hits the ball tremendously hard. His footwork makes it clear that he has plenty of time to watch the ball and that he uses it right on to the bat. His forty-five was a delightful knock, though it was hard lips on Willie Hung to get that extra two inches of break on, only to see a chance put down in the slips! Parker-Smith's batting though not so polished, was very useful, and when Holland-Martin and Hargreaves got together I thought the Navy would get the runs. However, Hung, who seems to discard his spine when fielding, pounced on one at full speed and hesitation saw the Free Forester run out. Hargreaves, however, took up the running and though his dearest friend would not call him a pretty bat he began to get runs at an amazing pace, considering that he has a very limited reach. But when he went all was over and K.C.C. were not too far (Continued on Page 9.)

M.C.C. Team For West Indies

LEAVING LONDON TO-MORROW

The following members of the M.C.C. team, with the exception of Hendren, who has already arrived at the scene of the tour, will leave London for the West Indies to-morrow.

R. E. S. Wyatt (captain), Paine and Hollies (Warwickshire), E. R. T. Holmes (Surrey), D. C. H. Townsend (Oxford University), K. Farnes (Essex), W. E. Harbord and Leyland (Yorkshire), Hendren and Smith (J.) (Middlesex), Hammond (Gloucestershire), Ames (Kent), Iddon and Farrimond (Lancashire).

Captain G. W. Carlton Levick will accompany the team as honorary manager and four Test matches are included in the tour. The party of 14 has been completed by the selection of W. E. Harbord and Iddon, C. F. Walters, of Worcestershire, was among the first chosen, but on medical advice he had to decline the tour.

CAER CLARK NEEDLE MATCH

H.K. LADIES AND ST. ANDREW'S

CIVILIANS TRIAL

To-morrow the Hongkong Ladies, Champions of the Caer Clark Cup Tourney since its inception, will meet St. Andrew's in a needle game on the Marina ground at 2.45 p.m. and they will be represented by: B. Hance; E. M. Gray, J. Smalley; N. McKella, B. Pope, E. Heibling; W. Marsh, P. M. Harrop, J. Churchill, C. Ferguson and A. Jacks.

The H.K. Ladies—second team meet the C.B.A. at Sookunpoo at 3 p.m. and will be represented by: E. Barker; M. Wolfe, R. Smalley; E. O'Hagen; M. Bennett, H. Hance; J. Flex, J. Locke, E. Bonner, M. Ratley and V. Blackburn.

CIVILIANS v. REST

The Civilians' hockey team which is to meet the Combined Services on Sunday, defeated the Rest by two goals to one in a trial match played in the Police Training School ground yesterday afternoon. A feature of the game, which was played at a pace, was the splendid combination of the selected team's forward line. Several changes were noticed. Karnal Singh and J. Gonsalves played at back for the Civilians in the absence of F. V. Wong and E. V. Reed. G. Inker, of the Police, who was selected to play at right-half but cannot owing to a Police football League game on Sunday, played at right-half for the Rest, while A. S. Bliss replaced Parker. In place of C. Pike on the right wing for the Rest, Tulin Khan, also of the Police, was played.

It is a pity that Parker cannot appear in the final game. He played a remarkable game in defence yesterday. His place is being taken by Bliss, who has been finally selected.

The Civilians were attacking from the initial bully-off, the forward line combining well, especially Mackay, Divett and Gurbachan Singh. Their first goal game as the result of a penalty bully against Parker for obstructions Gurbachan Singh took the bully and placed the ball in the net.

In the second half, Awtar Singh equalised for the Rest as the result of a corner hit. Sousa, in goal, was unlighted. Towards the end of the game, Moss, in goal for the Rest, brought off many good saves. He saved in quick succession from Divett and G. Singh. Pinto missed an open goal.

The Civilians obtained their second goal through Divett. Moss cleared a shot from G. Singh but did not hit it well away. Mackay obtained possession and passed to Divett, who scored.

The Civilians are meeting the Services on the Marina No. 1 ground on Sunday, bully-off 3 p.m. sharp, and will be represented by the following team—U. B. Sousa; F. V. Wong and E. V. Reed; A. S. Bliss, W. A. Reed (Capt.), and E. L. Gosano; N. A. E. Mackay, G. E. R. Divett, Gurbachan Singh, J. M. Pinto and A. P. Sousa.

CAVALCADE SHOULD WIN SUB: GRIFFINS EVENT LAST MEETING OF SEASON

(By "Captain Foster")

To-morrow's meeting closes our racing season for the year and, on the whole, I think we have had a good season. I do not expect to see any "outsider" come romping home and paying a handsome dividend, but we should be treated to a very good race in the Tardy Handicap, confined to "C" Class ponies.

The three Autumn Champions come up for decision. Able Amazon stands out in a class all by herself, and she should have no difficulty in winning the Queensland Autumn Champions. At one time I thought we would see a small field in this race, but I am glad to hear that there will be at least eight starters, more runners if riders are available.

Certain Starters are: Able Amazon, Butler, Australian Boy, Pih? Bag Tor, Davis, High Finance, P. P. Botelho, Just That, Deitz, Night Star, Black? Racing Heart, Heard, Saucy Face, Ip Kui Ying and the following are eligible to start—Alacrity, Athas, Bohemia Star, Nell Gwyn, Portia and St. Joan.

SOLDIER OF BRITAIN

Bag Tor should fill second place, and I expect Racing Heart to occupy the third position. I see no danger in the others except that both Just That and Saucy Face will run well and finish close up, but I cannot see either of them run into a place.

The line up for the Professional Cup and Subscription Griffins'

Champions will consist of the following:—Cavalcade, Pih, Classic Hall, Heard, Copper Idol, Davis, Little Beauty, Fane? Soldier of Fortune, F. F. Li, St. Ives, Deitz, The Bodega, Pan, Tiny Star, Butler, Young Chap, P. P. Botelho

CAVALCADE SHOULD WIN

On his last running in the Sub: St. Leger, Cavalcade should win the Champions, but I have a wholesome respect for Young Chap after his great run at Macao last Sunday, when he was beaten a short head by Sandy Bay in the South China Cup in the first time of 2-04. I thought he was an unlucky loser, as he was travelling much the faster of the two at the finish of that race. If the pony can reproduce the same form to-morrow he will make Cavalcade go all the way. We should, however, be treated to a good finish, and I have an open mind as to the result. Classic Hall, Copper Idol and Tiny Star should make a fight of it for the third position but I cannot see any one of them upsetting form by being returned the winner.

The probable contenders for the Hongkong Autumn Champions will be: Gladiator, Fane? King's Justice, Heard, Sacko, Pih

Soldier of Britain, Deitz, a small but select field. Soldier of Britain should again score, and I expect to see win very easily. It's a toss up between Sacko and King's Justice for the second place. If Sacko finds his best form I think he will have the better of the argument, and finish ahead of King's Justice. There is, however, practically nothing in it between these two ponies as one has beaten the other as many times as he has been beaten. Gladiator ran a sterling good pony in the Hongkong St. Leger and if he starts in this race I shall not be surprised to see him give a good account of himself (Continued on Page 5.)

RACE TRAINING TIMES

EXCELLENT FIGURES RETURNED THIS MORNING

Some excellent times were returned by ponies over the half and quarter mile gallops at Happy Valley this morning. Able Amazon, who is favoured by our Racing Correspondent for the Queensland Autumn Champions on Saturday when the last meeting of the season is to be held, clocked in at 27 secs. on the last quarter, while Soldier of Britain also finished strongly at 28 secs. over the last quarter.

F. A. CUP RE-PLAYS

Walsall And North'ron Enter Third Round

London, Dec. 13. After extra time Walsall defeated Watford by one goal to nil in their re-play in the second round of the F. A. Cup to-day. Walsall will now be at home to Southampton in the Third Round of the competition.

Workington were also eliminated from the F. A. Cup in their re-play with Northampton, losing by the only goal scored. The winners will meet Bolton in the Third Round at Northampton.—Reuter.

off winning. As a matter of fact had two slip catches been held—Bramwell and Hargreaves both early on—I think they would have pulled the match off. After their first five men the Navy batting was not so good.

THE NEW BOWLER

It is of course not strictly accurate to say that A. P. Pereira is a new bowler, but he has leapt into prominence when Beccolo entered the first Division this season, and I strongly suspect that his figures, though this proves nothing—better than those any bowler can show so far. Last Saturday, with no support from any other trundler on his side, he set the Craigengower batsmen back on their heels that they only got to a hundred and thirty-two very late, and so could not declare. His figures of 142—8—57—4 speak for themselves, and he, with P.M.N. da Silva, are the two who saved the side. Omar made a sensational return, bowling with all his old skill (16—8—21—61) and nearly pulled things off. But they had left it too late, although it is difficult to see how an earlier declaration could have been made. F. R. Zimmermann got ninety-three. These Zimmermanns are becoming nearly as difficult as the Lees—(by the way I see Tinker Lee has returned to the fold after some experiments in the dog-fight game)—and I shall have to get some labels for them. "P.T." I know, and "E" I know, but I am for the moment defeated by P.R.

THE ARMY WIN

It is very interesting to note that, while it was definitely reported in the Press that the I.R.C. lost on the last ball but one of the day, the Army—in two places—have gone out of their way to assure me that there were three minutes to go, which would have meant one (or two perhaps) overs more. I don't know if there was any actual divergence of opinion. If so, it is just as well that the match finished when it did! The I.R.C. certainly did their best to win as they put the Army in. However, either the Army bats were on top form or Minu was a bit off colour (I was told he was out of luck and was turning the ball if anything too much) and they made a very good start. They put up sixty in thirty-five minutes, but after that five wickets fell and the total was only eighty-nine. Pritchard, however was told to have a go, and did so to some purpose, as he hit two very nice sixes off Minu in successive overs. Walsh also got going and, after batting for an hour and a half, Garthwaite declared at 155, leaving the I.R.C. just five minutes longer than that to get the runs. Thanks to Garthwaite (4/34) and that much improved bowler Ballard (4/45 not 5/45), they won the game.

NO CAUSE FOR DESPONDENCY

The I.R.C. are having a very poor time just now and I trust it will not upset them too much. They have had bad luck. Admittedly rather weak now in batting, the loss of A. H. Madar has been a cruel blow to them. Then again, I think their skipper, Frank Pereira, has not been in the best of health recently, he was unwell at Shanghai, and could not play the week before this. To command success a fast bowler, more than any one else, must be at the top of his physical form. I sincerely trust Pereira will be fit for the rest of the season. To my mind, they have cause for optimism in the success of their new first pair, A. R. Abbas and A. S. Saffind. Both are youngsters, I am told, and the I.R.C. have now to do a bit of team building on them. With the excellent second eleven they have it should not be difficult.

HELD OVER

Cricket in the Senior Division has been so interesting that I have outrun my space and must hold other matches over until tomorrow when I hope to publish a supplementary article, in which I also want to refer to certain events in the cricket world at home.

TO-MORROW'S GAMES

The Senior Division is not very heavily engaged to-morrow. The most interesting game will be between the K.C.C. at home and the Hongkong Club. Barring the traditional upsets of cricket, the only question is whether they can make a draw of it. If the Club but first, K.C.C. may do so, but I hardly think otherwise if the Club are at full strength. But of course, K.C.C. may stage a come-back. I

UNITED SERVICES GOLF

R.A.M.C. Win Annual Competition

The United Services Inter-unit Golf competition held at Fanling yesterday was won by the Royal Army Service Corps team, comprising Lieut. Col. M. J. Williamson, Major C. F. W. Grellier, Major J. Wren and Capt. Trimble, with a score of 34 down.

The handicap competition was won by a team from H.M.S. Kent with a score of 11 down. The inter-unit competition resulted: R.A.M.C., 34 down. H.M.S. Medway, 39 down. H.M.S. Suffolk, 39 down. Inter-unit Handicap competition: H.M.S. Kent, 11 down. R. E. and R. C. of S., 12 down. R.A.M.C., 13 down.

The annual Lawn Tennis Tournament in connection with the Hongkong Cricket Club will commence on March 4, and as in former years there will be open for competition to all players who are resident in the Colony and members of Club affiliated with the H.K.I.T.A. Men's Championship Singles and Doubles competitions.

Lee Wai-tong, and Miss Ellen Tso entered the Second Round of the open Mixed Doubles Lawn Tennis Championship by defeating T. A. Pearce, and Miss H. Hancock by 6-4, 8-6. The winners will now meet L. Goldman and Miss R. Hancock.

Messrs. A. S. Watson & Co., Ltd., issue a most attractive calendar, with a coloured representation of racing greyhounds.

Since the Navy will have the better of it against the Civil Service, while of the two friendlies, Beccolo should beat the Press—unless F. Pereira and A. H. Rumjahn desert the I.R.C.—while the I.R.C. and C.C.C. match should be interesting. In the Second Division H.K.C.C. and the Navy should win their League matches, and I.R.C. and Police their friendlies.

RETURNING ON JANUARY 10

(By "Ringsider")

Seaman Barry, of H.M.S. Berwick, holder of the Welter-weight championship of China, who delighted local boxing fans in several contests staged in the Colony last year, is returning to Hongkong on January 10.

So confident is Mr. A. E. Ainsworth, Inspector on the Star Ferry, of Barry's ability that he told me yesterday that he was prepared to back Barry for $1,000 against any welter-weight or middle-weight in a fight in the Colony.

Barry returned home with the Berwick when she left earlier in the year for rest and re-commissioning.

Seaman Barry

slon and has rejoined the ship again for service on the China Station.

While at Home he has been doing well at the game according to a letter received to Mr. Ainsworth from Barry. He has to his credit a decision against Stoker Reynolds, who was matched against Jack Hood, holder of the Welter-weight Championship of Great Britain in 1926-32-33, and also a verdict against Pat Holey, conqueror of Harry Mason. Barry is also able to take a light-weight contest. Barry won the Championship of China at Shanghai last year when he defeated Johnny Hill on points.

China To Be Invited To Participate

Tokyo, Dec. 13. The Nishi Nishi states that, complying with the request of Senor Manuel Quezon, President, and of Dr. Getulio Vargas, Vice-President, of the Amateur Athletic Association of the Orient, who are due to arrive here aboard the President Coolidge, the Japan Athletic Federation are arranging a committee meeting at Tokyo for to-morrow.

The meeting will discuss the organization of the first Oriental Championship Games which are to be held in Tokyo in 1938 and also the legalization of the Federation's constitution.

The Manchukuo delegate will travel to Tokyo by air. The Japan Athletic Federation will submit a proposal to invite China as a member country.

It will be remembered that the Japan Athletic Federation severed relations with the China Athletic Federation following the dissolution of the Far Eastern Athletic Federation in May, 1934, because of China's refusal to admit Manchukuo.—Reuter.

SERIAL STORY

The Clue Of The Forgotten Murder:

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

CHAPTER XXXIII

Griff frowned at Bleeker. "You continually revert to the material," he said. "You see things objectively. I prefer to see them subjectively. I prefer to turn back the hands of time and to reason what is going to happen from a philosophic contemplation of what has happened. I repeat that Blanche Malone was beautiful, that her beauty was of the type that makes for misery. It is the flame in which the moth sings himself and it is such a pathetic thing that usually the flame from this beauty sings the wings of the beauty itself.

"Had she been, perhaps, a little more discreet, had it not been for this uncontrolled flame which swept through her very being, she could have gone far. Had she not gone through suffering she might have retained her beauty. Women do that, you know—women who have that sensual, physical type of beauty. It is retained and with the passing of years and the gathering of wisdom it ripens into a warm vitality which makes them well into middle age. But so often that type of beauty, recking nothing of consequences, sweeps all before it in its mad rush to have the demands of youth, and there comes suffering.

"And mark you this, my friend. Suffering and beauty do not go together. There is a certain type of ethereal beauty which is perhaps developed by suffering—rather it is a cold, spiritual something, the type of beauty which one admires in a snow-capped peak, which is illuminated by moonlight. But it is not the type of beauty one embraces, and, after all, since woman is what she is, the only type of beauty that is embraced, no, my friend, suffering and beauty do not go together."

Bleeker's tone was unsympathetic. "Go on," he said. "Show yourself a good time. You think you've discovered something I've overlooked. It makes you feel superior. You're nervous and your nervousness makes you want to talk and keep on talking. I'm just a target for your talk. Go ahead, and talk! Don't mind me. Hell, I'm just the guy who hired you! I don't count."

Griff's tone was pained. "Please," he said, "believe me. I am not talking for the sake of talking. You cannot understand murder unless you can understand the things which have led to that murder. There is nothing as important as an appreciation of motive. By that I mean appreciation of the emotional backgrounds of all the persons concerned. You cannot detect murder until you can judge it. You cannot judge it until you can understand it. That which might well incite one person to murder would cause only a mild irritation in another."

Griff ceased speaking and Bleeker frowned and turned away. Bleeker's manner was that of one who deliberately ignores a situation he cannot control. After several moments he spoke.

"When you are ready to talk facts," he said, "I want to listen. In the meantime, consider you're talking to yourself, not to me. I don't give a damn about your philosophy. I want facts."

Griff sighed, the sigh of one who has heard his innermost thoughts in an attempt to make an explanation, which, when it is expressed has become no explanation at all, but merely a further ground of misunderstanding.

The cab came to a stop.

"This," said Griff, "is the hotel where Mary Briggs is registered under the name of Stella Mockley. Or perhaps her real name is Stella Mockley and the name that she gave the police was one which was assumed for the occasion."

"At least," Bleeker said with more than a trace of impatience in his tone as he thrust a bill into the outstretched hand of the cab driver, "we will get something definite here, not merely a mass of philosophies and theories."

"We are," Griff admitted, "approaching the end of our chase. Soon we will have all of the straws in our hands and then we can see the direction in which those straws are pointed—a direction which Morden must have deduced from only the single straw which we know was in his possession. It is uncanny, it is, in short, unbelievable. I still think there must have been something of luck that entered into it, although, when one sees it, it is so absolutely simple that one wonders it did not crash home to the consciousness long before. That is the way with vital things. They are usually simple, usually plainly visible, camouflaged only by the lack of vision in the mind of the beholder."

Bleeker, apparently without listening, pushed on past the criminologist and barged through the swinging door of the hotel.

"Caution," Griff whispered. "Let us not rush in here, my friend. . . . It is too late!"

Griff paused by the doorway. Bleeker looked, followed the direction of his gaze, and also paused. A big man with stooped shoulders was standing talking with a man at the desk. Bleeker's eyes squinted for a moment in an attempt to refresh his memory. Then he muttered in an undertone, "It's Charles Fisher—Mrs. Cathay's lawyer."

"Over this way quickly," said the criminologist. "Perhaps he hasn't seen us."

He stepped behind a potted palm, dragging the publisher with him. The two men stood motionless. Fisher did not once glance in their direction but finished his conversation with the man at the desk. He stood for a moment, apparently undecided. Then, flinging his chin up as one does when reaching a decision, to plunge boldly into some unwelcome situation, he strode toward the elevators.

Griff squeezed the publisher's elbow. "Quick," he said. "We can't give him the advantage."

The two men crossed the hotel lobby, their feet pounding the flagged floor with quick impatience. Their gait was almost a run.

An elevator door slid open. Two women and a man got out. Fisher stepped in. The elevator operator looked out toward the lobby in a perfunctory survey and then placed his left hand on the door, preparatory to sliding it shut.

Griff gave a shrill whistle. The startled elevator operator looked at the two men hurrying across the lobby.

"Hold it," said Griff. The elevator boy held the door open.

Fisher, who had been staring at the toes of his shoes in frowning concentration, looked up with annoyance stamped on his countenance. The annoyance gave place to surprise, the surprise to a friendly smile, and then the smile faded, as an expression of annoyance once more came across his features.

"Well, well," he said, "It's Mr. Griff and Bleeker, publisher of The Blade. How are you gentlemen? You're going up?"

"Yes," said Griff, and pushed his way in the elevator, shaking hands with the attorney.

The elevator boy slid the door shut.

"Ninth floor," said the lawyer. "Ninth for us," Griff said. The elevator shot upward.

"What brings you to the city?" asked Griff.

"Oh, just a matter of routine business. I've got to see about taking the deposition of a witness in a will case. Wasn't it unfortunate about poor Frank . . . Cathay, you know?"

"Indeed it was," Griff said. "Apparently there was poison administered."

The lawyer shook his head. "I'm afraid," he said, "it is a very serious matter."

"You don't think it was suicide?" asked Griff.

The elevator slid to a smooth stop at the ninth floor. The lawyer opened the door. The lawyer was sneaking as he stepped into the corridor.

"No," he said slowly. "I don't think that it was suicide. However, I am not a lawyer, I don't know just what it was and I doubt if we can ever prove that it was not suicide."

"You'll make the attempt?" Griff asked, standing in the corridor.

"It depends," Fisher said with a burst of frankness. "There's no particular secret about it. The feelings of the widow, of course, are concerned. There is, so to speak, the honour of the family. These things are sentimental matters but, more than that, there may be a very material cash consideration involved. There was life insurance of something like $500,000. The insurance policies provided that in the event of a death by accidental means the amount of the policies would be doubled."

"You mean," Griff asked, "if it should appear Cathay took poison accidentally it would make a difference of $500,000 to his estate?"

(To Be Continued.)

WRONG LADY SUMMONED

MOTOR OBSTRUCTION CASE

A summons against Miss G. Simmons, driver of private car No. 2107, for having caused an obstruction in Pedder Street on December 1, at 8.50 p.m., was dismissed by Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, when it was stated by Inspector Alexander that it was "another Miss Simmons" who had been driving the car that day.

Sergeant Clark, in evidence, stated that he saw four cars parked outside the white lines on the north side of the car park in Pedder Street. The defendant's car was one of them. They were causing obstruction to cars coming down Pedder Street and wanting to turn north again without going round the traffic post.

Miss Simmons denied having driven car No. 2107 that day, and said it did not belong to her. It belonged to her sister, Mrs. Proulx, but she did not know who was driving it that day.

Capt. G. F. McClean, driver of private car No. 2084, admitted a summons of causing obstruction in Pedder Street on December 1 at 9.50 p.m., and was fined $5.

Defendant stated that he left his car on the wrong side of the post. He had put it in a place which he thought to be the car park, but later realised it was the wrong side.

C. E. Stewart, driver of private car No. 779, was fined $5 for placing his car in Duddell Street, which is closed to traffic, without the permission of the Inspector General of Police.

FLYING RIGHTS

AN ANGLO-FRENCH UNDERSTANDING

London, Dec. 13. The Under Secretary for Air, Sir Philip Sassoon, referring in the House of Commons to the Anglo-French negotiations regarding the operation of Imperial Air Services across French territory, said a formal agreement had not yet been concluded, but a provisional understanding had been arrived at, which, subject to the elucidation of certain details, he had every reason to hope would lead to an agreement at an early date. — British Wireless.

NO VIOLATION OF "OPEN DOOR" PACT

TUNGSTEN SALES TO BRITISH INTERESTS

Nanking, Dec. 14. It is authoritatively learned that the report that Mr. Ariyoshi, Japanese Minister to China, had lodged a protest with the Nanking Foreign Office against the exclusive sale of tungsten to British interests by the Hunan Government, is unfounded.

It is explained in Chinese official circles that such action taken by the Hunan Government does not constitute a violation of the "open door" policy or equal opportunity principles. — Central News.

"TELEGRAPH" ART SUPPLEMENT

Topical Pictures
To-morrow

To-morrow's issue of the Telegraph Pictorial Supplement will again contain a varied selection of pictures of topical interest.

Weddings illustrated will be those of Mr. John Davidson and Miss M. B. Stonebridge, and of Mr. William Kew and Miss Angelina Ng.

Amongst sporting pictures will be a group of the Committee of the Kowloon Riding Club, pictures of the senior and junior basketball teams of Wah Yan College, and students of the Young Chung Girls' School in physical exercise.

Other photos will show a group of Roman Catholic dignitaries photographed in connection with the Nazareth Mission golden jubilee, and officers and men of the Italian cruiser Quarto laying a wreath on the Cenotaph.

ANGLO-FRENCH AMITY

UNITED IN CAUSE OF PEACE

London, Dec. 13. The French Foreign Minister, M. Laval, has sent a telegram to Sir John Simon expressing his gratification at the close collaboration between the British and French Governments, which during the recent session of the League Council, had so effectively served the cause of justice and peace.

In reply Sir John Simon expressed the hope that Anglo-French collaboration which had been so fruitful at Geneva would be continued and developed, with results always as fruitful and with equal benefit to world peace. — British Wireless.

BRITISH FORCE FOR SAAR

MAIN BODY LEAVES NEXT WEEK

London, Dec. 13. Major General Brind, who is to command the International Force in the Saar, left London to-day, when he was seen off by General Sir A. Montgomery Massinberg, Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

General Brind will reach Saarbrücken to-morrow. An advance party of British officers arrived there to-day. The main body will proceed via Calais next week.

The last time a force of this size went to the Continent their purpose was to make war. Their object now is to keep peace. — British Wireless.
